- II. Edward, b. 26 April, 1852.

- II. Constance-Julia Eleanor-Georgiana.
- III. Edith-Horatia-Emma-Frances.

Lineage.

NOEL, the ancestor of the Viscounts Campden and Earls of Gainsborough, came, with his wife Celestria, into England with the CONQUEROR 1066, and for his services obtained the manors of Ellenhall, Wiverton, Podmore, Milnes, and other lands, by grants from the new monarch. His eldest son,

ROBERT, was Lord of Ellenhall, &c., and in the reign of HENRY I. had a grant of the greatest part of Gainsborough, in the co. of Warwick, from Lawrence, the prior of Coventry, and the monks of that house. In the reign of HENRY II. he founded the priory of Raunton, or Roughton, near Ellenhall, his chief seat, for Canons Regular of St. Augustine. This Robert had two sons,

1. Thomas, sheriff of Staffordshire for seven years, in the reign of HENRY II., and for one year upon the accession of RICHARD I., who left, at his decease, two daus.,

1 Alice, m. to William Harcourt, of Stanton Harcourt, and had Ellenhall and other estates as her moiety of her father's property.

2 Jean, m. to William de Dunston, and had for her share Roughton, &c.

- II. Philip.

The second son,

PHILIP NOEL, had Hilcote, in Staffordshire, from his father, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT NOEL, Lord of Hilcote, who m. Joan, dau. of Sir John Acton, Knt., and from this Robert we pass to his lineal descendant,

JAMES NOEL, Esq. of Hilcote, who, in the 5 HENRY VIII., was nominated, by act of parliament, one of the justices of the peace for assessing and collecting the poll tax, &c. He m. a dau. of Richard Pole, of Langley, in the co. of Derby, by whom he had seven sons, of which ROBERT, the eldest, continued the line at Hilcote, while another branch was founded by the third son.

ANDREW NOEL, Esq., who at the dissolution of the monasteries, had a grant of the manor and site of the late preceptory of Dalby-upon-Wold in Leicestershire, which had belonged to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and of the manor of Perrybarr, in Staffordshire. In the 28 HENRY VIII. he was sheriff of the co. of Rutland, as he was afterwards, both in the reign of EDWARD VI. and in that of MARY. In 1548 he purchased the seat and manor of Brook, in Rutlandshire, and was elected for that county in the first parliament of Queen MARY. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Hopton, Esq. of Hopton, in Shropshire, and widow of Sir John Perient, by whom he had ANDREW, his heir, and several other children. He espoused, 2ndly, Dorothy, dau. of Richard Conyers, Esq. of Wakerley, in the co. of Northampton, widow of Roger Flower, Esq., by whom he had one son,

JOHN, father of

WILLIAM NOEL, Esq. of Kirby Mallory, high sheriff of Leicester in the 2d of JAMES I., whose son and successor,

VERE NOEL, Esq. of Kirby Mallory, was created a Baronet in 1660, and was ancestor of

Mr. Noel was s. at his decease by the eldest son of his first marriage,

SIR ANDREW NOEL, Knt. of Dalby, in the co. of Leicester, who was a person of great note in the time of ELIZABETH, living in such magnificence as to vie with noblemen of the largest fortunes. Fuller, in his Worthies of England, saith, that this Andrew, "for person, parentage, grace, gesture, valour, and many other excellent parts (amongst which skill in music), was of the first rank in the court." He was knighted by Queen ELIZABETH, and became a favourite, but the expences in which he was involved obliged him to sell his seat and manor at Dalby. Her majesty is said to have made the following distich upon his name—

"The word of denial, and letter of fifty,
Is that gentleman's name who will never be thrifty."

He was thrice sheriff of the co. of Rutland, and member for that shire in several parliaments during the reign of Queen ELIZABETH. Sir Andrew m. Mabel, 6th dau. of Sir James Harrington, Knt., and sister and heir of John, Lord Harrington, of Exton, by whom he had issue,

BAPTIST NOEL, second Baron Noel, and third Viscount Campden. This nobleman was as faithful a cavalier as his father, and raised a troop of horse and company of foot for the service of the king. For his estates he was obliged to pay to the sequestrators £9,000 composition, and an annuity of £150 settled on the Teachers of the period. The erection of this Sessions House, from 1610 to 1612, cost Sir Baptist about £800. Prior to its construction, the magistrates used to meet at the Castle close by. Hicks's Hall lasted more than a century and a half, when, falling into a ruinous condition, an application was made to parliament in 1778 to rebuild it. A piece of freehold ground was purchased on Clerkenwell Green, and the present edifice raised there about 1782. In the committee room is a handsome chimney-piece, carved in wood (temp. JAMES I.), removed from the old hall; and in the dining room a portrait, in a fine state of preservation, of Sir Baptist Hicks, also removed from the former Sessions House. It is not known by whom it was painted, and hitherto no engraving has ever been made of it. Sir Baptist Hicks also built Campden House, Kensington, in 1612, which was destroyed by fire in 1863.

Lineage.

The Earls of Galloway are of the royal blood of Scotland. ALEXANDER, sixth lord high steward of Scotland, obtained from King ALEXANDER III., in 1263, a grant of the lands of Gairlies, (or as more commonly called, Garlies). He m. Jean, dau. and heir of Angus MacRorie, Lord of Bute; and d. in 1283, leaving issue, JAMES, seventh lord high steward of Scotland, grandfather of the first Stuart king, ROBERT II., and consequently ancestor of the whole royal line of Stuart; and a younger son, SIR JOHN STEWART, who obtained from his father the lands of Garlies. This Sir John Stewart was a great hero and patriot, and was one of those worthies who, when King ALEXANDER III. died, entered into that memorable association, the members of which bound themselves to stand by one another in defence of their country and of him who by right of blood should inherit Scotland's crown. This historic obligation bears date 20 Dec. 1286. Sir John

Stewart was among the nobles chosen on the part of Robert Bruce in his competition for the Scottish throne with John Balfour in 1292. Stewart performed many notable actions in the public service, and fell at last fighting valiantly against the English at the battle of Falkirk, 22 July, 1298. He m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Alexander Bonkill, of Bonkill, in whose right he acquired possession of many lands, and particularly of the barony of Bonkill. He left issue,

- I. Alexander Stewart, of Bonkill, 1st Earl of Angus, ancestor of the Dukes of Douglas, extinct.
 - II. Sir Alan Stewart, of Dreghorn, ancestor of the Stewarts of Darnley, Earls and Dukes of Lennox, extinct.
 - III. SIR WALTER STEWART, of Dalswinton, of whom presently.
 - IV. SIR JOHN STEWART, of Jedburgh, great grandfather of MARIAN STEWART, of whom infra.
 - V. Sir James Stewart, of Preston.
- I. Isabella, wife of the gallant Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, who obtained the barony of Garlies, which passed to his son, John, Earl of Moray.

The third son,

SIR WALTER STEWART was a gallant adherent of Robert Bruce, and shared in that prince's toils and glories. When Bruce had won his crown, he gave to this faithful and able follower, the lands and barony of Dalswinton. Sir Walter Stewart also obtained the Barony of Garlies from John Randolph, Earl of Moray, by charter, wherein the earl denominates Sir Walter his uncle. Sir Walter Stewart was father of

SIR JOHN STEWART, of Dalswinton, who, true to the attachment of his race to the house of Bruce, was, according to Rymer, made prisoner (when King DAVID BRUCE was also taken) at the battle of Durham, in 1346. He was likewise one of the hostages for King DAVID in 1357. This Sir John left issue,

SIR WALTER STEWART, of Dalswinton and Garlies, a personage of note temp. ROBERT II. and ROBERT III. He had an only child and heir,

MARION STEWART, who m. 17 Oct. 1396,

SIR JOHN STEWART, son of Sir William Stewart, of Jedburgh, sheriff of Tiviotdale (said to be of the house of Darnley), and left two sons, WILLIAM; and John, provost of Glasgow. The elder son,

SIR WILLIAM STEWART, of Dalswinton and Garlies, obtained the estate of Minto, in 1423, after much opposition from the Turnbulls, the former possessors. He was living in the year 1479, and had issue,

ANDREW, who d. before his father, s. p.

ALEXANDER (Sir), his successor.

Thomas (Sir), of Minto, ancestor of Lord Blantyre, Walter, of Tonderghie.

Sir William was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, of Garlies, who m. Elizabeth Steward, by whom he had John, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Shaw, of Hallie, but d. s. p. before his father, and another son, his successor,

ALEXANDER who in his father's lifetime was designated Alexander of Garlies, which continued to be the chief title of the family till they were made Earls of Galloway. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Archibald Douglas, of Cavers, heritable sheriff of Teviotdale, and dying in 1501, was s. by his elder son,

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, of Garlies, who was in great favour with JAMES IV., and who fell with his royal master at the fatal battle of Flodden, 9 Sept. 1513. He left by his wife, Elizabeth Kennedy, one son and sixteen daus., the eldest of whom, Janet, was m. to Sir John Kennedy, of Culzean, and each of the others became the wife of a laird of distinction. Sir Alexander was s. by his only son,

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, of Garlies, who was one of the prisoners taken at the rout of Solway, in Nov. 1542; and appears to have been released, in 1543, on giving his son and heir ALEXANDER, as his hostage. He m. thrice, and had, by his 2nd wife, Margaret, dau. and heir of Patrick Dunbar, Esq. of Clugston, with other issue, an eldest son,

ALEXANDER STEWART, the younger, of Garlies, who was a personage of great bravery and spirit, and was a zealous promoter of the Reformation. He sent a challenge to the famous Sir William Kirkcaldy, of Grange, governor of Edinburgh Castle for the Queen; but Sir William evaded the rencontre, from caution, not from fear, because he deemed his life at that time of the utmost consequence to his sovereign. Alexander Stewart was appointed commissioner for the Kirks of Nithsdale, and was a member of the convention or parliament that met in 1560. He was knighted when Lord Darnley was made Earl of Ross, and was one of those who signed a protection, together with Queen MARY'S privy council, to the Earl of Murray to come and discover the pretended conspiracy against his life in 1565. Sir Home s. as 10th bart., at the decease of his father, 19 June, 1857.

Lineage.

This family is a branch of the ducal house of Gordon.

RICHARD DE GORDON, the first of this illustrious race on record, granted to the monks at Kelso, some land at Gordon, near the cemetery, and a right of pasturage in Huntley-Strather, A.D. 1150.

THOMAS DE GORDON, his son, confirmed to them the donations and agreements made by his father Richard, and at his death his lands devolved upon his son,

SIR THOMAS DE GORDON, Knt., who dying in Sept. 1258, left by his wife, Marjory, an only dau.,

ALICIA DE GORDON, who m. her cousin, Adam de Gordon. He accompanied the Earls of Atholl and Carrick to Palestine, under the banner of Louis IX. of France in 1268, and died on that expedition. He was s. by his son, ADAM DE GORDON, who died fighting for the independence of his country in the troublous year 1296; his wife having sworn fealty to King EDWARD I., obtained restitution of her estates, 3 Sept. 1296.

SIR ADAM DE GORDON, Knt., their son, joined Sir William Wallace in 1297; was one of the wardens of the marches in 1300, and one of the ten commissioners elected at the general council of the Scottish nation at Perth, invested with full parliamentary powers for the settlement of Scotland, under King EDWARD I. in 1305; that same year he was fined three years' rent of his estates for his former opposition to that monarch. Sir Adam, together with the Earl of Atholl and others, was sent in January, 1311, by King EDWARD II., to make a truce with the Scots, for which they had ample powers; he afterwards joined the standard of Bruce. In 1320, King ROBERT I. sent him as one of the ambassadors to Rome, to obtain a repeal of the sentence of excommunication against him. As a reward for the faithful services of Sir Adam, King ROBERT made him a grant of the baryny of Strathbogie, in Aberdeenshire, forfeited by David, Earl of Atholl. He fell at the battle of Halidon Hill, 19 July, 1333, supporting the cause of King DAVID II. Sir Adam left issue, two sons,

I. ALEXANDER (Sir).

II. WILLIAM, ancestor of the Viscounts of Kenmure,

SIR ALEXANDER DE GORDON, the eldest son, was engaged in the battle of Halidon Hill, and according to Abercrombie, fell at the battle of Durham, 17 Oct. 1346; his son,

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, Knt., was taken prisoner at the battle of Durham, from whence he was not released until the year 1357, when the Earl of Douglas became one of his sureties. He was s. in his estates by

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, his son, who obtained from King ROBERT II. a charter, confirming the grant of the lands of Strathbogie which King ROBERT I. had made to his great-grandfather, Adam de Gordon, Knt. The Earl of March, in 1377, having burned the town of Roxburgh, the English borderers retaliated on the lands of Sir John de Gordon, who entering England, was encountered by Sir John de Lilburn, whom he defeated at Carham, after a desperate affray. This gallant warrior fell at the battle of Otterburn, 19 August, 1388, leaving a son,

SIR ADAM DE GORDON, of Huntly, who also fell in the field of battle, being killed at Homildon, 14 Sept. 1402, having descended the hill accompanied only by one hundred men the whole of whom perished in a desperate attempt to turn the fortune of the day. By his wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William de Keith, great marischal of Scotland, he had an only child,

ELIZABETH DE GORDON, m. to Alexander Seton, son of Sir William Seton, of Seton, thenceforth styled Alexander de Seton, Dominus de Gordon et Huntly; he was engaged in the battle of Harlaw (1411), in the wars in France (1421), among the Scottish forces sent to assist the dauphin; but that same year, at the desire of King JAMES I., who was then the prisoner of HENRY V., he came over to England, and was one of the ten commissioners to treat for the release of that monarch, and became one of the hostages for his ransom in 1424, when the annual revenue of Alexander, Lord of Gordon and Huntly, was stated at 400 marks. He had issue by his wife, Elizabeth,

ALEXANDER.

William, ancestor of the SETONS of Meldrum.

Elizabeth, m. to Alexander, Earl of Ross.

Sir Alexander was s. by his eldest son.

ALEXANDER DE SETON, Lord of Gordon, who accompanied Margaret of Scotland to France in 1436, on her marriage with the dauphin, after the murder of JAMES I. He was sent in 1437, ambassador to England, to treat of a peace, which was happily concluded in 1439, and was created, 29 Jan. 1449, Earl of Huntly, with limitation to the male heirs of his 3rd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Lord Crichton, and received from King JAMES II., a charter, granting him all and whole of the lordship of Strathbogie, the lands of Cluny, Tuteh, Ohyn, Glentanry, and Glenmuck, in Aberdeenshire; the lordship of Gordon, in Roxburghshire; and the barony of Panbride, in Forfarshire. He d. in 1470, and was buried at Eigin. His lordship m. thrice: 1st, Jean, grandaun, and heiress of Sir William de Keith, great marischal of Scotland, by whom he had no issue; 2ndly, Egidia, dau. and heiress of Sir John Hay, of Tullibody, who bore him one son, SIR ALEXANDER, who s. to his mother's estates, and was ancestor of the SETONS of Touch; and 3rdly, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Lord Crichton, high chancellor of Scotland. Upon the heirs male of this marriage who were obliged to take the name and bear the arms of GORDON, the succession to the Earldom of Huntly was settled. By this last lady he had issue,

GEORGE, 2nd EARL OF HUNTLY, who m. the Princess Jane, dau. of King JAMES I. of Scotland.

GORDON, SIR WILLIAM, Bart. of Earlston, co. Kirkcubright, lieut.-col. late 17th lancers, b. 20 Oct. 1830; s. his father, as 6th bart., 8 Jan. 1843; entered the army 1849, and has since served with his regiment, the 17th lancers, in the Crimea and India. He m. 1st, 21 Sept. 1857, Catherine, relict of P.-J. Joyce, Esq., of Caltra Park, co. Galway, and second dau. of John Page, Esq., the eldest son of Samuel Page, Esq., cornet of the Black Horse, and afterwards surveyor-general of customs, and filicer of the Court of Exchequer in Ireland, and by her (who d. at Bombay, 17 Jan. 1864) has had a dau., d. an infant. Sir William m. 2ndly, 23 Aug. 1866, Mary-Grace, eldest dau. of Sir William Maxwell, Bart. of Cardoness.

(Sir William has, since the death of Adam, 11th Viscount Kenmore, 1 Sept. 1847, been looked upon as the nearest heir male, now a lieut. of SIR JOHN GORDON, 12th Lord of Lochinvar, who was created, by King CHARLES I. Viscount of Kenmore and Lord of Lochinvar; the patent for which creation is dated 8 May, 1633, and conferred the title upon Sir John and his heirs male for ever "et heredibus suis masculis pro perpetuo.")

Lineage.

The house of EARLSTON descends from Alexander, 2nd son of William de Gordonne, 6th Lord of Lochinvar, whose great-grandson.

JOHN GORDON, of Earlston, m. 1st, in 1582, Margaret, eldest dau. of John Sinclair, of Earlston, by whom he had,

Margaret, who m. 1st, John McKnight, of Kilgubhanidy; and 2ndly, Edward Maxwell, of Balmangan, but had no issue to either.

He m. 2ndly, in 1585, Mary, 2nd dau. of James Chalmers, of Gaitgirth, by whom he had,

I. Alexander, 2nd Gordon of Earlston, M.P.

II. William, of Carleton, father of James, 2nd Gordon of Earlston, who d. unm. in 1688, and settled Carleton on his cousin, John.

III. Robert, d. s. p. et v. p. in 1626.

IV. James, a col. in the army, d. s. p. in 1654.

V. David, of Gordonstown in Galloway, father of Nathaniel, 4th Gordon of Carleton.

John Gordon, of Earlston, d. in 1628, and was s. by his son, ALEXANDER, 2nd Gordon of Earlston, M.P.; b. 1587; who sat in the Scottish parliament for the co. of Kirkcubright. He was a staunch royalist, yet one who attracted particularly the notice of CHARLES I., for the undaunted courage with which, in his place, he maintained that the wearing the Scottish Crown involved no right (as in England) to the headship of the Church of Scotland, and reminded his Majesty of the act called the Confession of Faith. His whole line of conduct procured for him the sobriquet of "The Earl of Earlston," a title CHARLES I. had once jocularly bestowed upon him in a conversation with Lord Galloway, Earlston's kinsman. An offer of a Baronetcy was made to Earlston, but declined. He m. 4 Jan. 1612, Elizabeth, dau. of John, 2nd Gordon of Penninghame (the grandfather of Alexander, 5th Viscount Kenmore) by which lady he had,

I. John, younger of Earlston; b. 1613; m. Jean, 3rd dau. of David Boswell of Auchleuck; and d. v. p. 29 Oct. 1645 without leaving issue.

II. William, 3rd Gordon of Earlston.

III. Robert, d. unm. in 1654.

I. Margaret, m. in 1638, to Thomas Hay, of Arieland.

Alexander Gordon, of Earlston, d. in Nov. 1653, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, 3rd Gordon of Earlston, b. 1614, who, while a 2nd son, entered the university, and took his degree; but on the death of his elder brother, entered the army. He felt, like his father and his countrymen in general, great resentment at the execution of CHARLES I.; he upheld the right of CHARLES II. to the Scottish throne; he gloried in the placing of that crown on his Majesty's brow at Stone in 1651, and he joined in those movements that ultimately led to his restoration to the English crown, in 1660. Earlston m. 26 Nov. 1648, Mary, 2nd dau. of Sir John Hope, Lord Craighall, by whom (who survived ill 1690) he had issue,

I. ALEXANDER GORDON (Sir), of Earlston, 2nd baronet.

II. WILLIAM GORDON (Sir), of Afton, the 1st baronet.

III. John, 3rd Gordon of Carleton.

1. Margaret; m. in 1682, Sir James Holborn, of Menstrie.

William Gordon of Earliston was slain at Bothwell Bridge, 22 June, 1679; and was s. in his estate by his eldest son, Alexander, afterwards Sir ALEXANDER, the 2nd baronet. The 2nd son,

I. Sir WILLIAM GORDON, of Afton, Bart., b. 1654, sought at first his fortune abroad. He joined in 1670 the army of Frederick, the great Duke of Brandenburg, and was for fifteen years engaged in constant active military service. Subsequently joining in the projected descent of Monmouth and Argyle, he landed on the west coast of Scotland with the latter, 27 May, 1685, while Monmouth landed on the south of England. Sir William made his escape after the failure of these expeditions, and rejoined the Prussian army. He then formed part of the Prince of Orange's more successful expedition, landing at Torbay with that prince, 5 Nov. 1688. Sir William was again actively in the field when WILLIAM III. was "with heroic constancy contending against the superior forces of France." Indeed, three days after his marriage he was called to embark for Flanders, to take the field with his regiment (the 25th); the French king having laid siege to Namur. He fought again at Steinkirk in July, 1692, and remained on the Continent till 1698, being in all King WILLIAM's battles, down to the peace of Ryswick in 1697, and attaining the rank of lieutenant-col. He was frequently wounded: two of these wounds being gun-shot, he was obliged to take now a less active sphere. He enjoyed, for them, pensions to the value of £182 a-year. He was allowed to retain the value of a company in his own regiment, and he was made Governor of Fort William, in Scotland. He was, moreover, honoured, 9 July, 1706, with a Scotch baronetcy, with remainder thereof, failing heirs of his own body, to his brother Alexander, and the heirs of his body. Sir William m. 26 Feb. 1692, Mary, dau. of Sir George Campbell, of Cessnock, but by this lady (who survived him till 1733) he had no issue; and while her ladyship's estates went to her sister the Countess of Marchmont, the title of baronet, and his own estate of Afton, went, at his death, in Dec. 1718, to his brother,

II. Sir ALEXANDER GORDON, of Earliston, b. 1650. This gentleman's name is conspicuous in Scottish history. He escaped to Holland after the battle of Bothwell Bridge; and in his absence was (19 Feb. 1681) declared guilty of treason, and adjudged to suffer death when taken; while forfeiture of his estates was decreed. He was sometime afterwards captured on board ship, and on 21 Aug. 1683 ordered to be beheaded in virtue of the old sentence. But as there was a wish to put some questions to him, the execution was deferred; and he was reconsigned to prison till a point of some difficulty, connected with his examination, should be answered in London: the question being, "Whether one under a sentence of death could be put to question by torture." To which answer was made, "Yes, as to any crimes after condemnation" (meaning the condemnation of 1680); and it was accordingly resolved to examine him upon events of which he might be cognisant, for the period of three years and a-half, between Feb. 1680 and Aug. 1683. The examination is given in Bishop Sprat's Rye House Plot, with which he had, as it came out, been unjustly charged; and of which he declared his ignorance, when believed to be on his death-bed, 7 Dec. 1683. His state of health did not admit of his being put to the torture more than being examined with the instruments before his eyes. He was detained a close prisoner thereafter successively in the Castle of Edinburgh, on the Bass Rock, and in Blackness Castle, till 5 Jan. 1689, when the Revolution released him. During his nearly six years' imprisonment he spent part of his time in wood carving, and executed some pieces, curiously descriptive of his times and family. He had a good taste in heraldry, which formed another amusement. He had, on coming of age in 1671, introduced the bezant into his coat of arms, as indicative of his maternal descent. He m. 1st, 16 Nov. 1676, Janet (b. 1653), eldest dau. of Sir Thomas Hamilton, of Preston, Knt., and by her (who d. 26 Feb. 1696) he had, with others who died before attaining their majority,

I. THOMAS (Sir), 3rd baronet.

Lineage.

MAURICE, Lord of Prendergast, in Pembroke, "a righte valiaunte captain," says Holinshed, was one of the Norman knights who united with Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, in the invasion of Ireland. He landed in May, 1169, at the head of ten knights and two hundred archers, took a prominent part in the successful war which followed, and obtained an ample share of the conquered lands. In 1177, he gave his castle of Prendergast, in Wales, to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem; and eventually joining that order, was prior of Kilmainham at his death in 1205. From Gerald, his youngest son, descended the Prendergasts of Mayo, whose Irish title of MacMaurice gave name to the barony of Clannmorres, and of which family Lord Oranmore represents the Castle Magarret branch, whilst his eldest son,

PHILIP DE PRENDERGAST, was summoned as a baron in 1206, 1207, and 1221. He m. Maude, dau. and heir of Robert de Quincy, with whom he acquired the town of Enniscorthy and constableness of Leinster. He d. 1226, leaving issue, GERALD, his heir; WILLIAM, of whom hereafter; and David, who was in the hands of his kinsman Sayer de Quincy, earl of Winchester, as a hostage for the loyalty of the Earl of Pembroke during the Barons' War, but was released by royal writ signed at Runnymede, 12 June, 1215, during the conferences with the barons, which resulted in the grant of Magna Charta. The eldest son,

GERALD DE PRENDERGAST, who founded the Abbey of Enniscorthy, m. 1st, Matilda, dau. of Theobald le Botiller, by whom he had an only dau., Maria, wife of John, Lord Cogan. He m. 2ndly, Matilda, dau. of Richard de Burgo, and sister of the Earl of Ulster, by whom he had likewise an only dau., Matilda, who m. Maurice de Rochfort; and dying in 1251, his estates, including forty knights' fees in Wexford and Cork, fell to their issue as co-heirs, whilst the representation of the family devolved on his brother,

WILLIAM DE PRENDERGAST, younger son of Philip; he obtained the lordship of Newcastle, co. Tipperary, from Jeffrey de Marisco, circa 1230, in exchange for other lands. By his wife Alianore, who appears to have been co-heir of William de Bermingham; he had issue, John and JEFFREY, of whom the former d. s. p. in 1275, when his brother,

mingham seized his castle of Mullough, which he recovered at law in 1276, but it was burnt by Lord Slane in the following year. He was summoned to the parliament of 1281, and fined one hundred shillings for being absent. His eldest son,

SIR PHILIP DE PRENDERGAST was involved in further litigation with Lord Slane. He d. 1303, leaving three sons, JEFFREY, his heir; MAURICE, whose son JOHN, though blind, eventually inherited Newcastle, and was ancestor to Viscount Gort; and Sir Philip, of Drangan, co. Tipperary. The eldest son,

JEFFREY DE PRENDERGAST m. Isolda, dau. of Piets, 3rd Lord Atheryn, whose ward he had been. He was sheriff of Tipperary in 1327. To him, Baldwin, Lord Slane, gave up his claim to the manor of Newcastle, by a deed dated 13 Jan. 1311, enrolled in the Court of Exchequer in Ireland; and as this estate continued henceforth in the undisputed possession of this family, we shall at once proceed to

JAMES FITZTHOMAS PRENDERGAST, Esq. of Newcastle, who m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir John Grace, Knt. of Courtstown, and d. 3 Feb. 1575, leaving several sons, of whom, Edmond, of Tullaghmelan, was M.P. for Tipperary in 1585; whilst the eldest,

JEFFREY PRENDERGAST, Esq. of Newcastle, m. Joane, dau. of Thomas, 1st Lord Cahir, by his 2nd wife, Ellen, only dau. of Thomas, 12th Earl of Desmond, and heir to James, the 13th earl, who was killed by Sir Maurice Fitzgerald, in 1535. He d. 12 March, 1615, leaving issue by her (who became co-heir to the BARONY OF CAHIR under the limitations in the patent, on the death of her half-brother, the 2nd baron, in 1559), THOMAS, his heir; James, d. s. p.; Robert, of Ballybeg; and Richard. The eldest son,

THOMAS PRENDERGAST, Esq., m. Eleanor, dau. of the Hon. In 1583, being then under age, he joined, at Queen ELIZABETH'S request, in a surrender of the title and estate of Cahir to Sir Theobald Butler, the male heir of that family, to whom the Queen granted them by a new patent under which they descended to the Earls of Glengall. He d. 1 March, 1626; and Thomas, 2nd Lord Cahir of the new creation, dying soon after, without male issue, his eldest son,

JAMES PRENDERGAST, Esq. of Newcastle, claimed that barony, the legality of the surrender of 1583 being doubtful, and Eleanor Butler, the other co-heir, who m. Sir John Oge Fitzgerald, son of John, 14th Earl of Desmond, having d. s. p., which led to his being unfortunately killed in Cahir Castle, 12 Dec. 1627, by his kinsman, Edmond, 3rd Lord Dunboyne, whose wife was the heir of the deceased nobleman. He had m. Catharine, dau. of Sir John Fitzgerald, o the Deccies, but d. s. p. and was s. by his brother,

EDMOND PRENDERGAST, Esq., to whom the Manor of Newcastle was confirmed, in 1639, by the Commission of Grace, with divers privileges, which were sanctioned by act of parliament in 1641; but the civil war breaking out soon after, all his castles were dismantled, and his estates seized by CROMWELL. He d. about 1656, leaving issue, Jeffrey (whose sons, following James II. into exile, were distinguished officers in the French service), and

THOMAS PRENDERGAST, Esq. of Croane, who lived to be more than 100 years of age, as appears by his tomb at Newcastle. He d. 1725, having m. Eleanor, dau. and co-heir of David Condon, Esq., the attainted chief of that once powerful sept, by whom he left, with other issue,

THOMAS, 1st baronet.
Jeffrey, of Croane, m. Margaret, dau. of William Daniel, Esq., and d. 1735. GRACE.

GRACE, SIR WILLIAM, of Grace Castle, co. Kilkenny; b. 16 Nov. 1817; s. as 3rd baronet, upon the decease of his father, 27 Jan. 1841.

Lineage.

The old and eminent family of GRACE ranks amongst the earliest of the Anglo-Norman settlers in Ireland. Under the banner of Richard de Clare, the well-known Strongbow, RAYMOND FITZ-WALTER, surnamed Le Gros, landed in that kingdom, became subsequently (anno 1176) its viceroy, and marrying Basilia de Clare, Strongbow's sister, acquired the extensive district in the county of Kilkenny, still denominated "The Cantred of Grace's Country." To this gallant soldier the GRACES trace their foundation; and now, at nearly the close of seven centuries, it is but justice to observe, that the bright fame of the illustrious founder has passed un tarnished through the long line of his distinguished descendants. Raymond Le Gros had two sons,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Maurice Fitz-Raymond, Lord of Lixnaw and Clanmorris, ancestor of the noble house of Fitzmaurice, Earls of Kerry.

WILLIAM LE GROS, or Fitz-Raymond,* the eldest son of Raymond, became Baron of Courtstown, or Tullaroan, and Lord of Grace's Country. He m. Margaret, dau. of Robert Fitz-Warren, of Wales; but we pass from him to his descendant (the twelfth in succession).

* From a younger brother of this William Le Gros, MAURICE, derive the EARLS OF KERRY.

† The intermediate feudal lords of Courtstown allied with the Carews, the Fitzpatrick's (Princes of Upper Ossory), the Macmorroughs (Princes of Leinster), the Berminghams (Lords of Athenry), the Barrys, the Le Poers, the O'MEAGHERS (the first Milesian match they were permitted "for the better preservation of the peace" to make), and with other houses equally potent in those turbulent times.

Lord le Poer, of Curraghmore, co. Waterford, and had two sons, viz.,

JOHN, who at his father's decease became Baron of Courtstown, and Lord of Grace's Country.

GRAHAM, SIR ROBERT-JAMES-STUART, of Esk, co. Cumberland, b. 2 Dec. 1845; s. his father as 10th Bart., 27 May, 1864.

Lineage.

This family claims descent from the renowned GRAEME, who, anno 404, commanded King FERGUS II.'s army, and was governor of Scotland in the minority of his grandchild, EUGENE II. In the year 420, this gallant person made a breach in the mighty wall which the Emperor SEVERUS had erected between the rivers Forth and Clyde, which has ever since borne the name of Graeme's Dyke. From the time of this eminent man, the GRAEMES are to be found in the records of Scotland, enjoying the very highest influence; but our limits prohibit individual detail; we therefore pass to

SIR DAVID GRAHAM, of Montrose, who was taken prisoner with King DAVID BRUCE, at the battle of Durham, in 1346, and whose son,

SIR PATRICK GRAHAM, Lord of Dundaff and Kincardine, was appointed one of the hostages for the said King DAVID'S ransom, in 1357. This Sir Patrick m. twice: from his first marriage descend the Dukes of Montrose; and of the second (with Eupheme, dau. of Sir John Stewart, of Railston, brother to King ROBERT II.) there was a son,

SIR ROBERT GRAHAM, Knt. of Elleston, who m. Eupheme, only dau. and heir of David Stewart, Earl of Strathern, and obtained in consequence that earldom. (From this alliance the family quarters the royal arms of Stuart). This Sir Robert being slain by Sir John Drummond, 1413, was s. by his son,

MALISE, Earl of Strathern, who changed the title to Menzies, that of Strathern being annexed to the royal house by King ROBERT II. This nobleman m. Anne, dau. of Henry Vere, Earl of Oxford, and had three sons and two daus.; the 2nd of which sons,

THE HON. SIR JOHN GRAHAM, of Kilbride, called John with the bright sword, left

RICHARD GRAHAM, from whom are lineally descended the GRAHAMS of the borders, both of the English and Scottish side, but chiefly the houses of Netherby and Plomp, co. Cumberland.

FERGUS GRAHAM, Esq. of Plomp, m. Sibill, dau. of William Bell, Esq. of God's Brigg, in North Britain, and had four sons; the 2nd of whom,

I. RICHARD GRAHAM, Esq., gentleman of the horse to James I., was created a Baronet, 20 March, 1629, by the style of Sir Richard Graham, of Esk, co. Cumberland. This gentleman purchased Netherby and the barony of Liddell, in the same county, of Francis, Earl of Cumberland. Sir Richard subsequently distinguished himself under the royal banner, particularly at Edge-Hill, where he was severely wounded, and lay amongst the slain for an entire night. He m. Catherine, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Musgrave, of Cumcatch, Cumberland, and was s. in 1653, by his elder son (the younger, Richard, was created a Baronet in 1662—see GRAHAM of Norton-Congers),

II. SIR GEORGE, who m. Lady Mary Johnston, dau. of James, 1st Earl of Hartfell, and sister of James, Earl of Annandale, and had, with other issue,

i. RICHARD, his successor, of whom presently.

ii. William, in holy orders, D.D., and dean of Carlisle and Wells, clerk of the closet and chaplain to Queen ANNE; d. in 1712, and left issue,

I Charles, in holy orders, rector of South Church, in Essex, m. Priscilla Billingley, of Tottenham, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Joseph Bezeley, Esq.) had issue,

WILLIAM, in holy orders, who inherited the baronetcy upon the decease of the last Viscount Preston.

Thomas-Fane-Charles, in holy orders, m. Anne, dau. of Joseph Harrington, Esq. of Clare, co. Suffolk, and widow of the Rev. Francis Greenwood, by which 1st husband she had an only son, Charles Greenwood, Esq., the eminent army-agent, and a dau., Anne, m. to Thomas Hammersley, Esq. of Pall Mall.

Bridget, m. to Thomas Elkington, Esq. of Coventry.

2 Robert, in holy orders, D.D., who succeeded to the Preston estates upon the decease of Lady Widdrington.

Sir George d. in 1657, and was s. by his eldest son,
III. SIR RICHARD, who was advanced, in 1680, to the peerage of Scotland, as Viscount Preston, and took his seat in the Scottish parliament in that dignity. His lordship was British ambassador to the court of France for many years, and subsequently secretary of state to JAMES II. Upon the Revolution, the viscount was committed to the Tower but soon released from imprisonment. Being afterwards, however, apprehended in an attempt to escape to his old master in France, he was sent to Newgate, arraigned for high-treason, and condemned, but pardoned, through the intercession of his friends, under the sign-manual, in June, 1691. He m. Anne, 2nd dau. of Charles Howard, 1st Earl of Carlisle, by whom he had (with two daus.) his successor, in 1693,

Robert Graham, D.D., father of Sir James Graham, of Netherby (see that title), while the ancient baronetcy of the family reverted to the deceased lord's cousin,

SIR JAMES GRANT, of that ilk, a man of hold and daring disposition, of good parts, and in great favour with JAMES V., from whom he obtained a charter, exempting him from attendance in court of judicature whatsoever, for his good services done and to be done, &c., dated Stirling, anno 1535; after wards got a charter under the great seal, from QUEEN MARY, "Jacobo de Frenchy, Terrarum de Lochelsh, Lochcarron, Lochbrine, &c.," in Invernesshire, dated 4 March, 1548. About the end of the 17th century, he acquired the estate of Monymusk, and fixed his residence there. In 1705, he was raised to the dignity of a Baronet of Nova Scotia by Queen ANNE; and 17 May, 1720, he received a special warrant, under the hand of his Majesty GEORGE I., granting him the unusual armorial addition of a bordure ermine, as a testimony of his sovereign's favour, and a memorial of his judicial eminence; together with two angels as supporters, the motto "Sum cuique," on a scroll above, and the motto "Jehovah Jireh," on a scroll below—the only instance in Scottish heraldry of a Hebrew motto. He early foresaw the important advantages that would accrue to Scotland from a union with England; and to this great measure he gave his zealous and influential support. He was endued with great mental qualities. Exalted piety, inflexible integrity, and unbounded benevolence, shone in every action of his life; and among his many generous acts he bequeathed a sum of money to build and endow a school in the northern part of the parish of Monymusk, which was executed some years ago, is now in full operation, and is attended by highly beneficial consequences to all classes, especially to the children of the indigent, who receive a free education. GRAY.

GRAY, BARONESS (Madalina Gray), of Gray, co. Forfar, and of Kinfauns Castle, co. Perth, in the peerage of Scotland, s. her brother 31 Jan. 1867.

Lineage.

The family of Gray or Grey is descended from Rollo, chamberlain to Robert, Duke of Normandy, who had from him a grant of the castle and honour of Croy, in Picardy, from whence his posterity assumed their surname, which was afterwards written Gray or Grey. The orthography is indifferent, Gray having been the usual mode of spelling in ancient times in England, as well as in Scotland. ROLLO was father of JOHN, lord of Gray, whose son, ANSCHEIL DE GRAY, was one of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR'S companions in arms at the battle of Hastings, and is recorded in the Domesday survey as lord of many manors and lordships in the counties of Oxford and Buckingham. Anschetil de Gray was father of RICHARD DE GRAY, who flourished in the reign of King HENRY I. He was father of ANSCHEIL DE GRAY, who had two sons, both named JOHN, one of whom was made Archbishop of Canterbury, in 1206. He was, by King JOHN, appointed lord-deputy of Ireland, and d. in 1214. His elder brother, JOHN DE GRAY, had a son,

HENRY DE GRAY, who was high in favour with King RICHARD I. and King JOHN. WALTER DE GRAY, who was probably brother of Henry, was made lord high chancellor by King JOHN, and in the 17th year of that king's reign, was made Archbishop of York. Henry de Gray had several sons,

- i. ROBERT,* of Rotherfield, whose male line ended in Robert, Lord Grey of Rotherfield, in the reign of King RICHARD II.
- ii. Richard de Gray, whose principal seat was at Codnor, in Derbyshire. He was ancestor of the Lords Grey of Codnor, whose male line failed in the reign of King HENRY VII.
- iii. John, from whom the most illustrious branches of the house of Grey have sprung. He was high in the favour of King HENRY III., and d. in the 50th year of that king's reign. He was father of Reginald, Lord Grey, of Wilton and Ruthyn, who had issue, John, Lord Grey, of Wilton and Ruthyn, who d. in the 17th year of King EDWARD II. He had issue, 1 Henry, Lord Grey, of Wilton, from whom descended a long line of Lords Grey de Wilton, the last of whom, Thomas, Lord Grey de Wilton, d. without issue, in 1614, and his inheritance was carried by his sister Bridget, into the family of Egerton, created, in 1801, Earl of Wilton; 2 Roger, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, the ancestor of the illustrious house of Grey, Earl of Kent. The elder line of this great family failed in Henry, Earl of Kent, who d. without issue, in 1639,

* Dugdale states that Robert of Rotherfield, and Walter, archbishop of York, were the sons of Henry de Gray, while Collins states that they were his brothers. It would seem from the chronology that Walter, at all events, must have been brother of Henry.

when his sister Susan carried the barony of Grey de Ruthyn into the family of Longueville, and from them, through the Yelvertons, Earls of Sussex, into that of the Marquis of Hastings. The younger line of Earls of Kent attained to ducal rank, in the person of Henry, Duke of Kent, in 1719; but on his death, in 1740, his earldom and dukedom became extinct. He is represented as eldest co-heir in the female line by Earl De Grey. A younger branch of the Lords Grey de Ruthyn attained to the highest importance. It was founded by EDWARD GREY, uncle to the first Earl of Kent, who acquired, by marriage, the barony of Ferrers of Groby. His eldest son, John, Lord Grey, of Groby, m. Elizabeth Wydvile, afterwards queen of King EDWARD IV., by whom he had issue, Thomas Grey, created Marquis of Dorset, by his stepfather, in the 15th year of his reign. His grandson, Henry, Marquis of Dorset, m. Lady Frances Brandon, granddaughter to King HENRY VII., was created Duke of Suffolk, and was beheaded in 1554. His unfortunate dau., Jane, was seated for a few days upon the throne of England. From his younger brother John, the Earls of Stamford are descended.

iv. William de Gray was seated at Sandiacre, in the co. of Derby, and was ancestor of the Greys of Sutton, whose inheritance passed, by a dau., to the family of Leek, Earl of Scarsdale.

v. Henry de Gray.

These families of Grey bore for arms, Barry of six, argent and azure, in chief three torteauxes. There is also a family of the name, of great antiquity, in the co. of Suffolk, descended from the same stock, and bearing the same arms, viz., De Grey, Lord Walsingham, so created in 1780.

Another great branch of the house of Gray has been seated for ages, with baronial rank, in the north of England, who have adopted different armorial bearings, viz., gules, a lion rampant, within a border, engrailed, argent. The ancestor of this family was Sir John de Grey, of Berwyke, in the co. of Northumberland, who was living in 1372. He was father of

i. John Grey, who acquired the lordship of Powis, by marriage with Joan, eldest dau. and co-heir of Edward Charlton, lord of Powis. He was created Earl of Tankerville, in Normandy, by King HENRY V., and was slain in the 9th year of that king's reign. The title of Lord Powis descended in his family for five generations, when Edward, Lord Powis, d. without issue, in 1551.

ii. Thomas Grey, of Werke. He was the ancestor of Sir Ralph Grey, of Chillingham, and his younger brother, Sir Edward Grey, of Howick, from whom Earl Grey is descended. Sir Ralph was living in 1615. His son William was, in 1623, created Lord Grey, of Werke, and his grandson, Forde Grey, was, in 1695, created Earl of Tankerville. His only dau. m. Charles Bennett, Lord Ossulston, who, in 1714, was created Earl of Tankerville.

The Greys of Scotland are descended from the same stock with the house of Chillingham, and the armorial bearings of the different families of the name in Scotland and in Northumberland are identical.

HUGO DE GRAY appears in Scotland as witness to a charter of Walter de Lundin before 1248.

JOHN DE GRAY is witness to many donations to the monastery of Coldstream, in the reign of King ALEXANDER III.

SIR HUGH DE GRAY and HENRY DE GRAY were among those Scottish barons who swore fealty to King EDWARD I., in 1296.

SIR ANDREW GRAY was one of the barons who joined King ROBERT BRUCE when he ascended the Scottish throne, in 1306. In consideration of his services he obtained from that monarch a grant, "Andræ Gray militi dilecto et fideli nostro," of all the lands and tenements which belonged to Sir Edward de Hastings, Knt., within the barony of Longforgund, the third part of the lands of Craigie, Wairiston, and Milton, in Forfarshire, dated in February, in the 9th year of his reign, 1314-15. He had also from King ROBERT BRUCE, charters of the lands of Broxmouth. He is witness to a charter of Sir Robert Lauder, in the beginning of the reign of King DAVID II. He m. Ada Gifford, a dau. of the house of Yester. He was father of

SIR DAVID DE GRAY, who is designed "Nobilis vir, David de Gray, miles," in a decree of the burghesses of Dundee, in 1348. He was father of

SIR JOHN GRAY, of Broxmouth. He had various charters of lands in the reigns of King DAVID II. and King ROBERT II. The last of these is dated in 1376. His eldest son, John Gray, was one of the Scottish nobles who were hostages for King DAVID II. in 1357. He is designed "John, son and heir of John de Gray." He predeceased his father without issue. Sir John was s. by his 2d son,

SIR PATRICK GRAY, of Broxmouth. He had from King

ROBERT II. a charter of the lands of Longforgund, in Perthshire, in Feb. 1373-4. He had a grant from King ROBERT II. in 1406, wherein he is styled "Dilecto consanguineo nostro Patrio Gray," and he is herein designed "Nobilis et potentis Domino Patrio Gray, Militi, Domino de Broxmouth." He had issue several sons and daughters. One of the latter, Margaret, was wife of Sir William Hay, of Erael, constable of Scotland. Sir Patrick was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ANDREW GRAY, of Broxmouth, who was created a Lord of Parliament before 9 Oct. 1437, by the title of LORD GRAY of Gray. (There is a doubt, however, whether this was the 1st lord, as the precise date of creation is not ascertained—see Creation). His lordship m. 1st, Janet, dau. of Sir Roger de Mortimer, with whom he obtained the Barony of Poulis, and by her had a son, Andrew, and six daus. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Walter Buchanan, Knt., and had four sons and a dau. He d. in the year 1449-50, and was s. by his eldest son,

This nobleman obtained a license from the crown to build the strong and beautiful castle of Huntly, in the Carse of Gowrie (which his family possessed for some ages), now called Castle Lyon, and belonging to the Earl of Strathmore. His lordship m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir John Wemyss, of Rires, and was s. by his grandson,

ANDREW, 3rd baron (son of Patrick, master of Gray, by Annabella, dau. of Alexander, Lord Forbes). This nobleman was one of the privy council to JAMES IV., and justice-general of Scotland. He m. 1st, Janet, only dau. of John, Lord Keith, son of William, Earl Marischal, by whom he had PATRICK, his successor, and two daus. He m. 2ndly, Lady Elizabeth Stewart, 3rd dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, uterine brother of JAMES II., and had a numerous family of which the eldest surviving son,

GILBERT, of Buttergask, m. Egiddia, dau. of Sir Laurence Mercer, of Aldie, and had, with other issue,

PATRICK, who inherited as 5th lord.

His lordship d. in 1514, and was s. by his eldest son,

PATRICK, 4th baron. This nobleman m. Janet, 2nd dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Huntly. He d. without issue, in 1541, and was s. by his nephew,

PATRICK, 5th baron (son of Gilbert Gray, of Buttergask), who m. Marion, dau. of James, Lord Ogilvy, of Anly, and dying in 1582, was s. by his eldest son,

PATRICK, 6th baron. This nobleman m. Barbara, 4th dau. of William, Lord Ruthven, and was s. in 1609, by his son,

PATRICK, 7th baron. This nobleman possessed all the talents of a courtier, and was distinguished by a graceful person, an insinuating address, an unbounded ambition, and a restless intriguing spirit. While Master of Gray, he spent some time in France, where he was admitted to the most intimate familiarity of the Duke of Guise; and on his return home to Scotland, he paid court to King JAMES VI. with great assiduity, obtained a great share of his favour, and was appointed gentleman of the bedchamber, master of the wardrobe, a privy councillor, and commendator of the monastery of Dunfermline, in 1584. In the same year, he was sent as ambassador to England, and again in 1586, in order to intercede with Queen ELIZABETH for Queen MARY. In 1587, he was banished from Scotland, and spent many years in Italy. A remission to him passed the great seal in 1593. He s. his father in 1609, and d. in 1612. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of John, Lord Glamis, without issue; and 2ndly, Lady Mary Stewart, eldest dau. of Robert, Earl of Orkney, by whom he had, with other issue, his son and successor,

ANDREW, 8th Lord Gray. This nobleman was lieut. of the gens-d'armes in France, under Lord Gordon, in 1624; and was much employed in the wars there. He resigned the heritable sheriffship of Forfarshire to CHARLES I., for which he got his majesty's bond for 50,000 marks, which was never paid. He was banished the kingdom by the parliament for being with Montrose, in 1645; but this sentence does not appear to have been carried into effect. He was excommunicated by commission of the General Assembly, in 1649, on account of his being a Roman catholic; and had a fine of £1500 imposed upon him by CROMWELL'S act of grace and pardon, in 1654. He was prevailed upon by CHARLES II. and the Duke of York, then in exile, to resign the lieutenancy of the gens-d'armes in France, in favour of Mareschal Schomberg, which office had long been enjoyed by Scotsmen, and never afterwards could be recovered. His lordship m. 1st, Anne Ogilvy, sister of the 1st Earl of Findlater, relict of James, Earl of Buchan, and had,

His lordship m. 2ndly, Dame Catherine Cadell, by whom he had one dau.,

Frances, m. to Capt. Mackenzie, son of the Bishop of Moray.

His lordship having thus no surviving male issue, obtained a new patent, dated 8 Jan. 1638-9, by which the dignity descended to the son of his only dau., Anne, Mistress of Gray, by William Gray, son of Sir William Gray, of Pittendrum. This Sir William Gray, of Pittendrum, had acquired great wealth by commerce, and deserved well of the country, by improving its foreign trade. He was a loyal subject to King CHARLES I., and was imprisoned and grievously fined by the Scottish parliament. He d. in 1648. Patrick, 8th Lord Gray, d. in 1663, and was s. by his grandson,

PATRICK, son of Anne, Mistress of Gray, by William Gray. Patrick, 9th lord, s. his grandfather in 1663, and d. in 1711. He m. Barbara, 2nd dau. of Andrew, Lord Balvaire, sister of David, 4th Viscount Stormont, by whom he had one dau., Marjory, Mistress of Gray, who m. John Gray, of Crichie, son of Robert Gray, younger son of Sir William Gray, of Pittendrum. Patrick, 9th Lord Gray, having no son, obtained from Queen ANNE, in 1707, a new patent of the Gray peerage, with the former precedence, to his son-in-law, John Gray, for life, and after his decease, to John Gray, his son, by Marjory, Mistress of Gray. In virtue of this patent,

JOHN GRAY became 10th Lord Gray during the lifetime of Patrick, 9th lord, his father-in-law, so that there were two Lords Gray existing at the same time. Of this very ancient Lincolnshire family several members had the honour of representing their native county in parliament; amongst whom were Richard Welby, in the 9th year of HENRY V.; Nicholas Welby, in the 29th of HEN. VI.; Richard Welby, in the 12th of EDWARD IV.; and William Welby, in the years 1654 and 1656. The Welbys have also filled the office of high-sheriff from a very early period, the 1st sheriff being Roger Welby, in the reign of RICHARD II.; and among others, Sir William Welby, of Gedney Welby, who was created K.B. at the coronation of JAMES I.

Miscrage.

This family, which is of Norman extraction, traces its descent from Malahucius, uncle to Rollo, Duke of Normandy, the renowned ancestor of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

NIGELL, son of Roger de Toigny, standard-bearer of Normandy, great-grandson of the said Malahucius, arrived in England with an elder brother, Robert (ancestor of the noble race of the Staffords), in the train of WILLIAM; and at the time of the survey held extensive possessions in the cos. of Derby and Stafford, of which, Grasele or Gresley, in the former, where he fixed his abode, was one. This Nigell left a son,

Lineage.

This family claims descent from Gilbert, 2nd son of Malcolm, Lord of Macgregor, who d. in 1374; but whether the claim be well founded or not, it is certain that the Griersons of Lag have been settled in that part of Scotland for a period exceeding four centuries.

THOMAS GRIERSON, Laird of Arde, obtained 6 Dec. 1408, a charter from his cousin, John M'Rath de Lachs, conveying to him all right and claim which he, the said John, had to the lands of Lag. From this Thomas lineally descended.

SIR WILLIAM GRIERSON, Knt. of Lag, who was appointed, in 1623, the keeper of certain rolls. He m. in 1593, Miss Maxwell, sister of William, Lord Herries. Sir William d. about the year 1629, and from this time the family of Lag seem to have made an alteration in their surname, calling themselves GRIER, instead of GRIERSON, for some generations. Sir William was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT GRIER, Knt. M.P. in 1639. This gentleman m. in 1622, Margaret, eldest dau. of Sir James Murray, of Cockpool, by whom he had four sons and a dau. Sir Robert d. in 1634, and was s. by his eldest son, Sir John Grier, Knt., but his male issue failing, the line of descent was carried on by the posterity of the 2nd son,

JAMES GRIERSON, Esq., who left a son,

I. ROBERT GRIERSON, Esq., who s. in 1669, to the estates of his cousin, Sir John Grierson, Knt. of Lag, and was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 28 March, 1685. Sir Robert m. Henrietta, dau. of James, 2nd Earl of Queensberry, by whom he had four sons. This gentleman, who enjoyed a pension from the crown of £200 a year, was s. at his decease by his eldest son.

II. SIR WILLIAM, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Richard Musgrave, of Hayton; but dying without male issue, the title devolved upon his brother,

III. SIR GILBERT. This gentleman m. Elizabeth, dau. of Col. Maitland, of the coldstream regt. of guards; and dying 7 Feb. 1766, was s. by his son,

IV. SIR ROBERT, who m. Margaret, eldest dau. of the Hon. Alexander Dalzell, of Glenae, by whom he had four sons and six daus. Sir Robert's grand-dau. GUINNESS.

GUINNESS, SIR ARTHUR-EDWARD, Bart. of Ashford, co. Galway, and of St. Stephen's Green, in the city of Dublin, M.P. for the city of Dublin, b. 1 Nov. 1840; s. his father as 2nd bart., 19 May, 1868.

Lineage.

The family of GUINNESS claims descent from the ancient and eminent house of Magennis, in which formerly vested the Viscounty of Iveagh. Several members of the Magennis family lie interred in the churchyard of St. Catherine's, Dublin, and in the parish register, the transition of the name from Magennis to M. Guinness, or Guinness, is clearly traceable. The first who bore the name, as at present spelt, was

RICHARD GUINNESS, Esq. of Celbridge, in the co. of Kildare, b. about the year 1680. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Wm. Read, Esq. of Hutton Read, co. Kildare, and by her (who was b. in 1698, and d. 28 Aug. 1742) had issue. The eldest son,

ARTHUR GUINNESS, Esq. of Beaumont, co. Dublin, m. Olivia, dau. and co-heir of William Whitmore, Esq. of Dublin, by Mary, his wife, dau. of John Grattan, Esq., and cousin of the Right Hon. Henry Grattan, and had issue, of which the 2nd son,

ARTHUR GUINNESS, Esq. of Beaumont, co. Dublin, J.P., and D.L., b. 12 March, 1768, held for many years, honoured and respected by all classes of his fellow-citizens, the foremost place amongst the merchants of his native city of Dublin. His connection with the mercantile community extended over more than sixty years, and his public services during that long period may be estimated by the universal regret of the whole country at his decease. He m. Anne, eldest dau. and co-heiress of Benjamin Lee, Esq. of Merrion, co. Dublin (of a branch of the English family of Lee, Earls of Lichfield), and had issue,

William-Smyth Grattan, of Beaumont and Park Annesley, d. 21 March, 1864 (see BERKE'S Landed Gentry).

Arthur-Lee, of Stillorgan House, co. Dublin, d. unm. 1862.

BENJAMIN-LEE, created a Baronet.

Susan, m. in June, 1832, to the Rev. John Darley, fellow of Trinity College, who d. Dec. 1836, leaving issue

Mary-Jane, m. in Oct. 1845, to the Rev. David Pitcairn, of Torquay.

Louisa, d. unm. 18 Jan. 1856.

Elizabeth, m. in April, 1849, to the Rev. William Jameson, of Hollybank, co. Dublin, and has issue.

Rebecca, m. 13 June, 1844, to Sir Edmund Waller, Bart. of Newport, co. Tipperary; who d. 9 March, 1851.

Mr. Guinness d. 9 June, 1855; his only surviving son was

I. SIR BENJAMIN-LEE GUINNESS, Bart., M.P., LL.D., J.P., and D.L., lord mayor of Dublin in 1851, and one of the ecclesiastical commissioners of Ireland, who was b. 1 Nov. 1793, and m. 24 Feb. 1837, Elizabeth, 3rd dau. of the late Edward Guinness, Esq. of Dublin, and by her (who d. 22 Sept. 1865) had issue,

1. ARTHUR-EDWARD, present bart.

II. BENJAMIN-LEE, roy. horse guards (blue), b. 4 Aug. 1842.

III. Edward-Cecil, b. 10 Nov. 1847.

1. Anne-Lee, m. 11 June, 1863, to the Hon. and Rev. William Conyngham Plunket, treasurer of St. Patrick's Cathedral, eldest son of John, present Lord Plunket, and has a son, William-Lee Plunket, b. 19 Dec. 1864.

He was elected M.P. for the city of Dublin in 1865, and created a baronet of the United Kingdom by patent dated 15th April, 1867. To the munificence and energetic and patriotic spirit of this gentleman his native city of Dublin owes much; especially the restoration of the venerable Cathedral of St. Patrick. Though almost in ruins when he commenced the great work, which he carried out at his own sole cost, and under his own personal direction, the Cathedral, restored in exact conformity with its original style, is now the finest specimen of church architecture in Ireland. In commemoration of this patriotic act, Her Majesty granted to the baronet and his successors the right to bear supporters.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the ducal house of Hamilton, springing from

THOMAS HAMILTON, of Orchardfield, who acquired, in 1522, from John, Earl of Lennox, the Barony of Bathgate, co. Linlithgow; and in 1524 purchased the lands of Ballincrieff, in the same shire. He was s. by his son,

THOMAS HAMILTON, who fell at the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, leaving two sons,

THOMAS.

John, a secular priest, who, leaving Scotland on account of his religion, took up his abode at Paris in 1573, and was appointed professor of philosophy in the college of Navarre. He became tutor to the Cardinal de Bourbon, in 1576; and to Francis de Joyeuse, afterwards a cardinal, in 1578; and was chosen rector of the university of Paris, in 1584. He was a zealous partizan of the League, and one of the council who offered the crown to PHILIP II. of Spain, in 1591. When HENRY IV. entered Paris, in 1594, Hamilton was arrested, but had liberty soon after to depart from Paris. He retired to Brussels, and in 1601, ventured to revisit his native country, after an absence of nearly thirty years. He found a temporary asylum at the castle of Lord Ogilvie; but in 1609 was arrested by a party of life-guards, and committed to the Tower of London, where he died.

The elder son,

SIR THOMAS HAMILTON, of Priestfield, had a charter of Balbyn, Drumcain, and Priestfield, in the year 1597. He was admitted a lord of Session in 1607, but resigned his seat on the bench to his 2nd son, the next year. Sir Thomas

11. Elizabeth, dau. of James Heriot, of Trabroun, and had issue (besides daus.).

THOMAS, his successor.

Andrew (Sir), of Redhouse, having m. Jean, dau. and heir of John Lang, of that place. Sir Andrew s. his father as a lord of session.

John (Sir), of Magdalen, co. Linlithgow; an extraordinary lord of session, and lord-register of Scotland.

Patrick, under-secretary of state to his brother, the Earl of Haddington.

Alexander, general of artillery, who had a high command in the troops sent to the assistance of GUSTAVUS-ADOLPHUS, King of Sweden, under the 1st Duke of Hamilton.

The eldest son,

SIR THOMAS HAMILTON, of Priestfield, b. in 1563, studied the law in France, was admitted advocate in 1587, and soon distinguishing himself at the bar, was appointed a lord of Session in 1592, by the title of Lord Drumcairn. He was subsequently one of the commissioners of the Treasury of Exchequer called Octavians, and king's advocate. In 1604, he was nominated a commissioner by parliament to treat of a union with England. In 1612, he was received lord-clerk-register of Scotland; and in the same year, succeeded Sir Alexander Hay, as secretary of state. He was elevated to the peerage, 30 Nov. 1613, as Lord Binning and Byres, was appointed lord-president of the Court of Session in 1616, and created Earl of Melrose, 20 March, 1619. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of James Bothwick, Esq. of Newbyres, by whom he had an only dau., Christian, m. 1st, to John, Lord Lindsay, and 2ndly, to Robert, Lord Boyd. His lordship, with the approbation of the crown, after the death of Sir John Ramsay, Viscount Haddington, changed the title of Earl of Melrose for that of EARL OF HADDINGTON, but with the precedence of the original patent. This nobleman acquired by the lucrative offices he enjoyed, one of the largest fortunes of his time, which was considerably augmented by the discovery of valuable mines upon his estates. He d. in 1637, and was s. by his elder son,

THOMAS, 2nd earl; who m. 1st, Katherine, 4th dau. of John, Earl of Marr, by whom he had four sons and a dau., and 2ndly, in 1640, Jane, 3rd dau. of George, 2nd Marquess of Huntly, by whom he left one (posthumous) dau., Margaret, m. to John, 1st Earl of Kintore. The Earl of Haddington having actively espoused the cause of the covenanters, was unfortunately blown up in the castle of Douglas, of which he was governor, 30 Aug. 1640, with several of his kindred and adherents, by the treachery of his page, one Paris, an English boy, who also perished. He was s. by his eldest son,

To prevent the junction of the two earldoms, it was contracted, however, at the period of her ladyship's nuptials with the Earl of Haddington, that the Earldom of Rothes should be inherited by the eldest son of the marriage, and the Earldom of Haddington by the second; in consequence of which contract, Lord Haddington was s. at his demise, in 1685, by his 2nd son,

THOMAS, 6th earl; who obtained a charter of the Earldom of Haddington, 25 Feb. 1687, and was appointed also, by charter, 23 Jan. 1691, hereditary keeper of Holyrood Park. His lordship m. Helen, dau. of John Hope, Esq. of Hoptoun, and sister of the 1st Earl of Hoptoun, and had,

Lineage.

The race of Douglas is amongst the noblest in Europe, whether we consider a long line of illustrious ancestors, a princely domain, a series of royal and noble alliances during seven centuries, or a well-earned renown for indomitable warlike prowess. The origin of this great house is lost amid the mists of antiquity; and we will not here attempt to weigh the conflicting claims of an indigenous and a foreign descent, both of which have been assigned to "The Douglas." Suffice it to say that he is found a chief of baronial rank, possessing large estates in Lanarkshire, in the days of WILLIAM THE LION and the two last ALEXANDERS; and that he rapidly rose to eminence during the stirring times of EDWARD I. and ROBERT BRUCE.

ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, of Douglas, lived in the reign of KING ALEXANDER II., and d. in 1240. He m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Crawford, of Crawford, by whom he had, i. William, his successor; ii. Andrew, ancestor of a very great branch of the house of Douglas, viz., Dalkeith. This race, after existing for several generations in great splendour as Barons of Dalkeith, were raised to the dignity of Earls of Morton. The main line ended on the death of James, 3rd Earl of Morton, in 1553. In 1588, Sir William Douglas, of Lochleven, the descendant of a remote branch of the Dalkeith family, was called to the succession of the earldom, and is ancestor of the present EARL OF MORTON. There are, however, families of the name of Douglas which are more directly descended from the great house of Dalkeith.

WILLIAM DOUGLAS, of Douglas, the eldest son, flourished in the reigns of ALEXANDERS II. and III., and d. in 1276, leaving two sons, Hugh, his heir, who d. without issue; and

WILLIAM DOUGLAS, of Douglas. He joined Wallace in 1296, but was obliged to make submission to King EDWARD I., and being sent to England, d. in the castle of York in 1302. By a dau. of William de Keith he had three sons, I. JAMES; II. Hugh, who had no succession; III. Archibald. The eldest son,

JAMES DOUGLAS, of Douglas, is known in history as "the Good Sir James," and in romance as the flower of chivalry. His personal history is that of Scotland during the time in which he lived. He was the friend and brother in arms of King ROBERT BRUCE; and after that monarch's death, he set out on a crusade with the intention of depositing

BRUCE's heart in the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. He was, however, killed in battle by the Saracens, on the frontiers of Andalusia, in 1330. Sir James was never married. He had two natural sons, who were highly distinguished, viz., William Douglas, the Knight of Liddisdale, who left no issue; and Archibald the Grim, Lord of Galloway, who afterwards became 3rd Earl of Douglas.

ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, brother of the Good Sir James, m. a dau. of Comyn of Badenoch, and had issue, William, and a dau., Eleanor, m. to Alexander Bruce, Earl of Carrick, and afterwards to James Sandilands, of Calder. Her descendant and representative is LORD TORPHICHEN.

WILLIAM DOUGLAS, of Douglas, s. in 1342, on the resignation of his uncle Hugh. He was the 1st EARL OF DOUGLAS. By Margaret, dau. of David, 12th Earl of Marr (and sister and heir of the 13th Earl), he had issue, James, and a dau., Isabel, who, on her brother's death, became Countess of Marr; she had no issue. The Earl of Douglas had another son, by Lady Margaret Stewart, dau. of Thomas, 2nd Earl of Angus (and sister and co-heir of the 3rd Earl), viz., George Douglas, who became Earl of Angus, and who also carried on the line of the great House of Douglas, and is ancestor to the DUKE OF HAMILTON.

JAMES DOUGLAS, 2nd Earl of Douglas and Earl of Murr, s. to the title before 1384. He m. the Princess Margaret, dau. of King ROBERT II., by whom he had no surviving issue. He had two natural sons, William Douglas, ancestor to the DUKES and MARQUESSSES OF QUEENSBURY; and Archibald Douglas, ancestor to DOUGLAS OF CAVERS. On the death of James, 2nd Earl of Douglas, in 1388, the title devolved on a natural son of the Good Sir James, viz.,

ARCHIBALD the Grim, Lord of Galloway, who became 3rd Earl of Douglas. He was one of the most powerful men in Scotland. By Joanna his wife, dau. and heir of Thomas Moray, of Bothwell, he had issue, i. Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas; ii. James, 7th Earl of Douglas; and a dau., Marjory, m. in 1400, to David, Duke of Rothesay, Prince of Scotland. He had also a natural son, William Douglas, Lord of Nithsdale, a renowned warrior, who m. the Princess Egilda, dau. of King ROBERT II., and had one dau., Egilda, heiress of Nithsdale, wife of Henry St. Clair, 2nd Earl of Orkney.

ARCHIBALD, 4th Earl of Douglas, s. in 1401. In 1424, he obtained the dukedom of Touraine from CHARLES VII., King of France, and was soon after slain at the battle of Verneuil. He m. the Princess Margaret, dau. of King ROBERT III., by whom he had a son, Archibald, 5th Earl of Douglas and 2nd Duke of Touraine, and a dau., Elizabeth, wife, 1st, of John Stewart, Earl of Buchan, constable of France, and 2ndly, of William St. Clair, 3rd Earl of Orkney.

ARCHIBALD, 5th Earl of Douglas, 2nd Duke of Touraine, in his father's lifetime was Earl of Wigton and Count of Longueville. He distinguished himself at the battle of Buglé, in 1421. He was one of the ambassadors to England to adjust the ransom of King JAMES I. In 1438, he was lieutenant-general of the realm of Scotland. He d. in 1439. He m. 1st, Matilda Lindsay, dau. of David, Earl of Crawford, without issue; and 2ndly, Euphemia, dau. of Sir Patrick Graham and Euphemia, Countess of Strathern, dau. and heir of Prince David, Earl of Strathern, son of King ROBERT II. By her (who, in 1440, m. 2ndly, James, 1st Lord Hamilton) he had issue, i. William, his heir; ii. David, executed along with his brother in 1440; i. Margaret, the fair maid of Galloway, m. 1st, in 1444, her cousin, William, 8th Earl of Douglas; and 2ndly, in 1452, her brother-in-law, the 9th Earl of Douglas; and 3rdly, John Stewart, Earl of Athol, uterine brother of King JAMES II., by whom she had issue, 1. Janet, wife of Alexander, 3rd Earl of Huntley; 2. Catherine, wife of the Lord Gray.

WILLIAM, 6th Earl of Douglas, 3rd Duke of Touraine, was inveigled into the Castle of Edinburgh, where he was arrested after a banquet, tried, and beheaded along with his brother in 1410. He was s. by his grand uncle, JAMES, 7th Earl of Douglas, younger son of the 3rd Earl. He survived his nephew till 1443. He m. Lady Beatrix Sinclair, dau. of Henry Sinclair, 1st Earl of Orkney of that house, by whom, besides daus., he had issue, i. William; ii. James; iii. Archibald, Earl of Moray; iv. Hugh, Earl of Ormond; v. John, Lord of Balveny; vi. Henry, in holy orders.

WILLIAM, 8th Earl of Douglas, s. his father in 1443. He m. his cousin, Margaret Douglas, heiress of Galloway, and he restored his family to its original power. In Feb. 1451-2, he was invited to visit King JAMES II., in Stirling Castle, by whose hand he was assassinated. Leaving no issue, he was s. by his brother, JAMES, 9th Earl of Douglas. In his time the ruin of the house of Douglas was accomplished. He rebelled against the Scottish king, and entered into treasonable correspondence with the house of York. He and his brothers were attainted. The title of Douglas ceased to exist, and the earl became an exile and a pensioner of the English crown. He at length d. a monk, in the Abbey of Lindores, in 1488. He left no issue, and with him ended the powerful line of Earls of Douglas.

We must now return to the branch of Angus, which, on the extinction of the Earls of Douglas, succeeded to a great portion of their power.

GEORGE DOUGLAS, only son of William, 1st Earl of Douglas, by Margaret Stewart, in her own right Countess of Angus, on the death of her brother, obtained, in 1389, a grant of the earldom of his mother's family. He m. in 1397, the Princess Mary, dau. of King ROBERT III., who afterwards m. 2ndly, Sir James Kennedy, 3rdly, Sir William Graham, of Kincairdine, and 4thly, Sir William Edmonstone, of Duntreath. By her he had, i. William, 2nd Earl of Angus; ii. George, 4th Earl of Angus. Dying in 1402, he was s. by

WILLIAM, 2nd Earl of Angus, who d. in 1437, leaving, by Margaret, dau. of Sir William Hay, of Yester, a son,

JAMES, 3rd Earl of Angus. He m. Princess Joanna, dau. of King JAMES I., and having no issue by her, who afterwards m. James Douglas, Earl of Morton, he was s. by his uncle,

GEORGE, 4th Earl of Angus. In his time the rebellion and ruin of the house of Douglas took place, and Angus did not fail to rise on their fall. In 1457, he had a grant of the forfeited Lordship of Douglas. When HENRY VI. took refuge in Scotland, Angus offered him substantial aid, and was promised an English dukedom. He m. Isabel, dau. of Sir Andrew Sibbald, of Balmorie. Besides numerous female issue, he had a son and heir, ARCHIBALD, 5th Earl of Angus, commonly called "The Great Earl," and "Bell the Cat." He was the most powerful and talented of the Scottish nobles, and was equally feared and respected by prince and people. He d. in 1514, in the Abbey of Whithorn. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Robert, Lord Boyd, Great Chamberlain of Scotland, by whom he had issue, besides daus., i. George, Master of Angus; ii. Sir William, of Glenberrie, of whom hereafter; iii. Gavin, Bishop of Dunkeld, a distinguished man of letters. He m. 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Sir William Stirling, of Kier, by whom he had a son, Sir Archibald, of Kilsplindie, who had a son of his own name, George, Master of Angus, the eldest son, fell at the battle of Flodden, in 1513. By Elizabeth, dau. of John, 1st Lord Drummond, he had issue, besides daus., i. Archibald, his grandfather's heir; ii. Sir George Douglas, of Pittendreich, of whom hereafter; iii. William, abbot of Holyrood House.

ARCHIBALD 6th Earl of Angus, a most powerful nobleman, s. his grandfather in 1514, and in the same year, he m. the Princess Margaret of England, Queen Dowager of JAMES IV., King of Scotland, by whom he had an only child, Margaret, wife of Matthew, 4th Earl of Lennox, by whom she had, Henry, Lord Darnley, King Consort of Scotland, father of JAMES I., King of Great Britain, who was heir of line of the Angus family. He m. again, 1543, Margaret, dau. of Robert, 5th Lord Maxwell, by whom he had no surviving issue. He d. in 1556, and was s. by his nephew, son of his brother,

SIR GEORGE DOUGLAS of Pittendreich. By Margaret Douglas, heiress of Pittendreich, he had issue, i. David, 7th Earl of Angus; ii. James Douglas, who m. Elizabeth, youngest dau. of James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton. He became Earl of Morton, and Regent of Scotland, and he was beheaded in 1581, without issue.

DAVID, 7th Earl of Angus, s. his uncle in 1556, and d. 1558. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Hamilton, of Clydesdale, natural son of James, 1st Earl of Arran. By her he had issue, i. Archibald, his heir; i. Margaret, wife, 1st, of Sir Walter Scott, of Buccleuch, and 2ndly, of Francis Stewart, Earl of Bothwell; ii. Elizabeth, wife, 1st, of John, 7th Lord Maxwell, and 2ndly, of Sir Alexander Stewart, of Garlies.

ARCHIBALD, 8th Earl of Angus, s. his father in 1558, and was placed under the guardianship of his uncle, the Earl of Morton. In 1585, he s. to the Earldom of Morton, which had been held by his uncle, the regent, beheaded in 1581. He m. 1st, a dau. of the regent, Earl of Marr; 2ndly, a dau. of the 4th Earl of Rothes; 3rdly, a dau. of John, 10th Lord Glamis, by whom he had a dau., who d. young. The earl d. in 1588. The earldom of Morton then devolved on Douglas of Lochleven, a remote cadet of the house of Dalkeith, though other families existed in the more direct line of succession, and the earldom of Angus devolved on Sir William Douglas, of Glenberrie, descended from Sir William Douglas, 2nd son of Archibald, 5th Earl of Angus. By Elizabeth Auchinleck, heiress of Glenberrie, he had

SIR ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, of Glenberrie. He m. 1st, Agnes Keith, dau of William, 4th Earl Maréchal, by whom he had a son, William. He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Sir Alexander Irvine, of Drum, by whom he had issue, 1. James Douglas, minister of Glenberrie. His grandson, Robert Douglas, was bishop of Dunblane in 1684, and d. 1716. He was ancestor of Sylvester Douglas, created Lord Glenberrie, of Kincardine, in 1800; and of Douglas, of Brigton, in Forfar. II. John, ancestor of Douglas, of Cruixton, Quarrelholes, and Blackmill.

SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, of Glenberrie, the eldest son, s. on the death of his relative, as 9th Earl of Angus. He m. Egidia, dau. of Sir Robert Graham, of Morphee, by whom he had, 1. William, his heir; II. Sir Robert Douglas, of Glenberrie, whose eldest son, Sir Robert Douglas, was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1625. He was ancestor of the family of Douglas, Baronet of Glenberrie. Of this family was Sir Robert Douglas, Bart., author of the Peerage and of the Baronage of Scotland. III. Gavin, of Bridgeford; IV. John, of Barras. He is said to have had two other sons. The earl d. in 1591, and was s. by

WILLIAM, 10th Earl of Angus. He was a member of the church of Rome, and d. in devout retirement, in Paris, in 1611. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Laurence, 4th Lord Oliphant, by whom he had, 1. WILLIAM, his heir. II. James, created in 1641, Lord Mordington. His male line is extinct. He is represented as heir of line by the BARONESS SEMPILL. III. Sir Francis of Sandilands, who had no issue. The eldest son,

WILLIAM, 11th Earl of Angus, lived in great magnificence at the Castle of Douglas, and was, by CHARLES I., created Marquess of Douglas, in 1633. He d. in 1660. He m. 1st, Margaret Hamilton, dau. of Claud, Lord Paisley, and sister to the 1st Earl of Abercorn, by whom he had issue,

1. ARCHIBALD, Earl of Angus, who predeceased his father; created by King CHARLES II. Earl of Ormond. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Esme Stuart, 3rd Duke of Lennox, by whom he had a son, James, 2nd Marquis of Douglas. He m. 2ndly, Jean, dau. of David, 2nd Earl of Wemyss, by whom he had a dau., Margaret, wife of Alexander, 1st Viscount Kingston, and a son, Archibald Douglas, who s. his father in the earldom of Ormond, but, in 1661, obtained a new patent creating him EARL OF FORFAR. His son, the 2nd earl, d. unm. in 1715, in consequence of his wounds in the battle of Sheriffmuir, where he served as a brigadier-general. The son and heir,

JAMES, 2nd Marquess of Douglas, m. 1st, Lady Barbara Erskine, dau. of John, 9th Earl of Mar, by whom he had a son, John, Earl of Angus, who, in 1692, was killed at the battle of Steenkirk, unmarried; and 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Robert, 1st Marquis of Lothian, by whom he had issue,

1. William, d. an infant; II. Archibald, 3rd Marquess of Douglas; and a dau., Jane, b. in 1698, and m. in 1746, Colonel Stewart, afterwards Sir John Stewart, Bart., of Grandtully, by whom she had two sons, twins, b. in Paris, in 1748, 1. James, 2nd Marquess of Douglas, d. in 1700, and was s. by his son, ARCHIBALD, 3rd Marquis of Douglas, who, in 1703, was created DUKE OF DOUGLAS. He m. in 1758, Margaret, dau. of James Douglas, of Mains, by whom he had no issue; and dying in 1761, his dukedom became extinct. The marquessate of Douglas and the earldom of Angus devolved on the Duke of Hamilton, the heir male. The great estates of the Douglas family became the subject of litigation between the Duke of Hamilton and Mr. Stewart, the nephew of the Duke of Douglas. This was The Douglas Cause, a celebrated lawsuit, which excited the interest of Europe. The point at issue was the filiation of Archibald Stewart, whose claim to be the son of Lady Jane Douglas and Sir John Stewart was disputed by the Duke of Hamilton. But after an unfavourable decision in the Scottish law courts, a final decision in his favour was given by the House of Lords in 1771.

ARCHIBALD-JAMES-EDWARD STEWART-DOUGLAS, of Douglas, thus legally acknowledged to be heir of the Douglas family in the female line, was created a British peer as BARON DOUGLAS, of Douglas Castle, in 1790. He m. 1st, Lady Lucy Graham, dau. of William, 2nd Duke of Montrose, by whom, with other issue, he had, Archibald and Charles, 2nd and 3rd Lords Douglas, and Jane Margaret, wife of Henry-James, Lord Montague; and 2ndly, Lady Frances Scott, sister of Henry, Duke of Buccleuch, by whom, with other issue, he had a son, JAMES, 4th LORD DOUGLAS, in holy orders, who m. Wilhelmina, dau. of General the Hon. * A cadet branch of the house of Hamilton settled in the seventeenth century in Sweden, viz., that of

HAMILTON, COUNT HAMILTON, and HAMILTON, BARON HAMILTON, of Sweden. This family is one of the most widely-spread and powerful branches of the house of Hamilton, and during the two centuries of its establishment in Sweden, it has risen to the highest honours, contracted the noblest alliances, and acquired immense wealth. Many of its members have been field-marschals, knights of the Seraphim, and presidents of the Diet, while others have held distinguished posts at court, and in the diplomatic and military service. The estates and lordships belonging to the different branches of the family extend over many of the provinces of Sweden, and, taken altogether, are more important than those of any other family in that kingdom.

Their immediate ancestor was MALCOLM HAMILTON, Archbishop of Cashel, who was consecrated in 1623, and died in 1629. He had issue by his first wife, Mary, dau. of Robert Wilkie, of Sachtinhill,

I. ARCHIBALD, of Ballygally and Moyner, in co. Tyrone, who by his wife, the Hon. Anne Balfour, dau. of James, Lord Glenawley, had no issue.

II. HUGH, who in 1624 entered the Swedish service. He was, in 1654, created Baron Hamilton de Deserf, in Sweden; and in 1660, Lord Glenawley, in Ireland. By his second wife, Susannah, dau. of Sir William Balfour, of Pitcullo, he had,

1. William, 2nd Lord Glenawley, who had no issue; and two daus., 1. ARABELLA-SUSAN, wife of Sir John Magill, Bart.; 2. NICOLA-SOPHIA, wife, 1st, of Sir Tristram Beresford, and, by him, mother of Marcus, 1st Earl of Tyrone; wife, 2ndly, of Lieut.-Gen. Richard Gorges.

III. JOHN, of whom hereafter.

IV. MALCOLM, a clergyman.

The Archbishop m. 2ndly, Jean, dau. of John Crawford, of Crawfordland, by whom he had,

V. LOUIS, who entered the Swedish service, and in 1654 was created Baron Hamilton de Deserf, in Sweden. He had a son, Gustavus, governor of Enniskillen.

The Archbishop's 3rd son,

JOHN HAMILTON, a captain in the army, was seated at Ballygally. By his wife, Jean, dau. of James Sounerville, descended from the house of Cannethan, he had issue two sons,

I. MALCOLM, ancestor to the Barons Hamilton.

II. HUGH, ancestor to the Counts Hamilton.

The elder son,

I. MALCOLM, entered the Swedish service in 1654; he rose to the rank of general. In 1664, he was naturalized among the Swedish nobles, and in 1689 he was created Baron Hamilton de Hagbey. He d. in 1699. His descendant in the 5th degree is HUGH-ADOLPHE, the present Baron Hamilton de Hagbey, born in 1802. The younger son of Capt. John Hamilton,

II. HUGH, like his elder brother, entered the Swedish service, where he attained to great distinction. He was general and master-general of the Swedish artillery; he was created, along with his brother, Baron Hamilton de Hagbey, in 1689: b. d. in 1724. Besides several sons whose lines are now extinct, he had a son, GUSTAVUS-DAVID, Baron Hamilton, b. 1699, who was one of the most distinguished generals in the Swedish service. In 1751, he was created Count Hamilton de Barsebeck; in 1765, he was field-marshal; he was knight of the Seraphim; b. d. 1788. He had, with other issue, three sons, ancestors of the Counts Hamilton,

I. Hugh-William, 2nd Count Hamilton de Barsebeck, whose line failed in his son, Gustavus, 3rd Count Hamilton de Barsebeck, in 1854.

II. ADOLPHE-LOUIS, Count Hamilton, had issue,

1. Count GUSTAVUS-WALTER, who d. in 1835. His grandson

His grace, although already a knight of the Thistle, was installed, in 1712, a knight of the Garter, and created an English peer, 11 Sept. 1711, as Baron of Dutton, co. Chester, and DUKE OF BRANDON, co. Suffolk; but upon applying for his seat in the House of Lords, it was objected that, by the 23rd article of the Union, "no peer of Scotland could, after the Union, be created a peer of England"; and the House of Lords so resolved, after a protracted debate. Lineage.

This is the nearest branch of the ducal house next to the great family of Abercorn. It springs from

ALEXANDER DE HAMILTON, 2nd son of Sir James de Hamilton, Lord of Cadzow, by Janet, dau. of Sir Alexander Livingstone, of Callendar, and next brother of the first Lord Hamilton, who espoused the Princess MARY of Scotland. He had a charter in 1449, from Alexander, Earl of Crawford, wherein he was styled "Alexander de Hamilton, of Quhitecamp, afterwards Silvertownhill." In a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates, granted to his brother, the first Lord Hamilton, of date 23rd October, 1455, this Alexander was called next in succession after his brother's family. He left two sons,

JAMES, his heir.

William, ancestor of the HAMILTONS of Westport.

The elder son,

JAMES HAMILTON, of Silvertownhill, in a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates, granted to his cousin-german James, 1st Earl of Arran, of date 16th June, 1512-13, was placed very near in the family succession. He m. a dau. of the family of Douglas, with whom he got the lands of Newton, in the barony of Drumsarguard, and by whom he had issue, JOHN, his heir; and a dau., m. to James Livingstone, ancestor of Viscount Teviot. He was s. by his son,

JOHN HAMILTON, designed of Newton, living in 1531. He obtained from his cousin, the Earl of Arran, a grant of the remaining portion of the lands of Silvertownhill. He m. a dau. of Sir John Somerville, of Camethan, and d. in 1535. His son and heir, ANDREW, predeceased him, leaving two sons, Andrew and Alexander. He was s. by his grandson,

ANDREW HAMILTON, of Silvertownhill (son and heir of James Hamilton), living in 1541. He m. a dau. of James Hamilton, of Stanehouse, and d. in the beginning of the reign of Queen MARY, leaving issue an infant son,

ANDREW HAMILTON, of Silvertownhill, who was carefully educated under the guardianship of his uncle, Alexander. He m. Elspeth, a dau. of Baillie of Carlin, by whom he had issue several children, but only one son survived him,

FRANCIS HAMILTON, of Silvertownhill, a very enthusiastic, wrong-headed man. He fancied himself bewitched by Dame Isabel Boyd, Lady Blair, which appears by several extravagant petitions to parliament from him in 1641. He d. not long after this, having greatly squandered away the family estate; and as he never was married, this branch of the family expired, and the representation devolved on the descendants of his grand-uncle, Alexander; which

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, tutor of Silvertownhill, got from his father the lands of Goslingtown, which sometime continued to be the title of his family. He m. Catherine Hamilton, by whom he had issue,

SIR ANDREW HAMILTON, of Goslingtown. This gentleman was a faithful and loyal subject of Queen MARY, who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He was at the battle of Langside, for which he was attainted, but had his possessions restored to him by the treaty of Perth, in 1572. He d. in 1592, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT HAMILTON, of Goslingtown, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and sole heir of Sir William Baillie, of Provan, lord-president of the Court of Session, by whom he got a great accession to his estate, and d. in 1642, leaving, with a dau., m. to Sir John Somerville, of Camethan, 1st, EDWARD, his heir; and 2nd, James Hamilton, who d. in 1655. His son James was of Newton, and was ancestor to the family of HAMILTON of Newton, now represented by the Rev. JOHN HAMILTON GRAY. James Hamilton, of Newton, had a son, Thomas, who carried on the line of his family; and a dau., Elizabeth, wife of John Gray, of Dalnarnock and Carnynte, b. 1688, and d. in 1768. Her grandson, Robert Gray, of Carnynte, became, in 1823, representative of the HAMILTONS of Newton, on the extinction of the direct line. He m. Mary-Anne, dau. of Gabriel Hamilton, of Westburn, and Agnes Dundas, heiress of Duddingston, granddau. of the 17th Earl of Crawford and Lindsay, and grand-niece of the Duke of Hamilton. By her he had an only son, the Rev. JOHN HAMILTON GRAY, of Carnynte, co. Lanark, rector of Walton-le-Wold, co. Leicestershire, and rural dean. He s. his father in 1833. He is vicar of Bolsover, in the county of Derby. He m. in 1829, Elizabeth-Caroline, eldest dau. of James-Raymond Johnstone, Esq. of Alva, in the county of Clackmannan, by Mary Cholmeley, sister of Sir Montague Cholmeley, Bart., of Easton, in the county of Lincoln. By her he has an only dau., Caroline-Maria-Agnes-Robina-Hamilton Gray, b. 26 June, 1833, and m. 25 Aug. 1852, to John-Anstruther Thomson, of Charleton, in the county of Fife, by whom she has a son, John-St. Clair-Anstruther Thomson, b. 4 June, 1853, and other issue. Sir Robert Hamilton, of Goslingtown, was s. by his elder son,

EDWARD HAMILTON, designed first of Balgray, afterwards of Silvertownhill. He d. in 1649, and was s. by his son,

I. SIR ROBERT HAMILTON, of Silvertownhill, a steady loyalist, and in great favour with CHARLES I., who made him a Baronet of Nova Scotia about the year 1646. He m. the Hon. Anne Hamilton, 2nd dau. of John, 1st Lord Belhaven, by whom he had, with other issue, his successor,

II. SIR ROBERT, of Silvertownhill, who embraced a military life, and rose to the rank of colonel in the army; dying at Fort William, in 1708, he was s. by his eldest surviving son,

III. SIR JOHN, who d. in 1748, leaving issue. The title came to his eldest son,

IV. SIR ROBERT. This gentleman having adopted the profession of arms, attained the rank of lieutenant-general, and was colonel of the 108th foot, a regiment reduced at the peace in 1763, when General Hamilton was appointed to the colonelcy of the 40th. Sir Robert m. 1st, Mary, dau. of W.-Pier Williams, Esq., by whom he had a son,

L i t t l e t o n.

By an ancient pedigree in the College of Arms, it appears that the family of LITTLETON, or LYTTLETON, was settled at Frankley, in Worcestershire, about 1235,* when it is recorded that

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, m. Emma de Frankley, an heiress, lady of the manor of Frankley; but whether he was a stranger in the country, or resided in the town of South Lyttleton, in the Vale of Evesham, as there is reason to think he did, is a matter of doubt. They had an only dau., EMMA, who m. 1st, Augerus de Tatlington, of Tredington, in the same co.; and 2ndly, Nicholas Whetastede. She was a benefactress to the Abbey of Halesowen, in Shropshire, and d. in 1298. Thomas Lyttleton, m. 2ndly, Asseline, dau. and heir of William Fitz Waryn, Esq. of Upton, one of the justices itinerant, and judge of the Common Pleas, 12 HENRY III., and next year sheriff of Worcestershire; by that lady he had three sons, THOMAS, his successor, Edmund, a priest, and John, who d. unm. The eldest son,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, resided at his manor of Coulesdon, in Upper Snodsbury, and had lands in Newenton (vulgo Naunton Beauchamp), in the co. of Worcester. In the 9th EDWARD II. he was elected knight of the shire for Worcester. He m. Lucia, dau. of John du Bois, or Atwood of a considerable family at Wolverley, in that county, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, who m. Julian, dau. of Robert de Somery, and had two sons: John, the younger, was appointed commissioner of array, with other the chief gentlemen of the county of Worcester, 1 HENRY IV., on a rumour of foreign invasion. He m. Beatrix Freschevel, of a noble family in the county of Warwick, by whom he had an only dau., the wife of Jeffery Frece, Esq. The elder son,

THOMAS DE LUTTELTON † recovered by a writ of right, the manor of Frankley, on failure of issue to his cousin, Thomas de Tatlington. He was esquire of the body to HENRY IV. and HENRY V., and had annual pensions granted him by both kings out of the fee farm rents of Worcester, pro bono et gratuito servicio, as expressed in the grants. He m. Maud, dau. of Richard Quartermain (and heir of a large estate at Ricote and North Weston, in Oxfordshire), by Joan his wife, dau. and heir of Grey of Rotherfield, and had an only dau. and heiress,

Elizabeth, who m. THOMAS WESTCOTE, Esq., but previously to her marriage, insisted that her husband should take the name of LYTTLETON.

He (Thomas) d. about the year 1421. Maud, his wife, surviving him, holding Frankley in dower or jointure, m. 2ndly, John Massey, Esq. His son-in-law,

THOMAS WESTCOTE, alias LYTTLETON, was escheator of Worcestershire, 29 HENRY VI., and d. in that reign, leaving by the heiress of Littleton, who m. 2ndly, Thomas Hewster, Esq. of Lichfield (with four dms., of whom Anne, m. Thomas Porter, Esq. of Barsden, in Warwickshire), four sons, viz.,

THOMAS, his heir.
 Nicholas, } who both retained their paternal surname
 Guy, } of WESTCOTE, though often solicited by their mother to call themselves LYTTLETON: she once expostulating with them whether they thought better of themselves than their elder brother; they answered, that he had a fair estate to alter his name, and if they might share with him they would do the like. NICHOLAS m. Agnes, dau. and heir of Edmund Vernon, of Staffordshire, and was ancestor of the Westcotes of that county. GUY m. Greencvill, of Gloucestershire, and from him descend the Westcotes of Devon and Somerset.
 Edmund, d. unm.

The eldest son and heir,

* Selden was possessed of two grants of lands to the monastery of Evesham, in 7 HENRY II. (1161), to both of which John de Lyttleton was witness. This is the most ancient mention of the name of Lyttleton to be met with; and as the land so given was at Lench, near South Lyttleton, it is probable this John was ancestor to Lyttleton of Frankley.

† Thomas thus spelled the name, and sealed with the chevron between three escallops, as used by his posterity.

SIR THOMAS LYTLETON, or (as with him more invariably spelt) LITTLETON, K.L., became one of the great law luminaries of his country, and is immortalized by one work alone, his celebrated Treatise on Tenures. In 1554, he was called to the degree of serjeant-at-law, and afterwards appointed steward of the Marshes, a part of the king's household; the next year he was constituted king's serjeant, and, 13 May, 1455, rode justice of the assize in the northern circuit. Having shown some inclining to the Lancastrian party during the war of the Roses, Littleton, on the accession of EDWARD IV., sued a general pardon, which was granted to him, and in the 4th year of that prince's reign, he was appointed one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas, when he had a grant of 110 marks out of the Customs of London, Bristol, and Hull; and moreover, 1068. 11½*l.* for a robe and furs, and 6*s.* 6*d.* for a summer robe. In the 15th of King EDWARD, he was made a knight of the Bath, with the Prince of Wales, and several persons of the highest distinction. Sir Thomas m. Joan, dau. and co-heir of William Burley, Esq. of Broomcroft Castle, in Shropshire, and relict of Sir Philip Chetwynd, Knt. of Ingestre, in Staffordshire (with whom he acquired large possessions), and had three sons

WILLIAM (Sir), of Frankley, from whom the LORDS LYTLETON. (Refer to that title.)

RICHARD, of whom presently.

THOMAS, of Spetchley, near Worcester, ancestor of the Lord-Keeper Lyttleton, temp. CHARLES I., and of Sir William Lyttleton, speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of WILLIAM III. †

This celebrated judge made his last will 22nd August 1481, and died the next day, at his seat at Frankley, in a great and good old age. His widow survived him twenty-four years, and d. 22 March, 1505, nearly fourscore, leaving a great estate, which came by her father and mother's § to her eldest son, Sir William. The 2nd son,

RICHARD LITTLETON, Esq., a lawyer of eminence, to whom his father bequeathed his Treatise on Tenures, and gave a moiety of the manor of Baxterley, in Warwickshire, m. Alice, dau. and heir of William Winesbury, Esq. of Pillton Hall, Staffordshire, and had,

I. Richard, d. s. p.

II. EDWARD (Sir), his heir.

* Which was commented upon by Sir Edward Coke, and called by him "the ornament of the common law," and which is constantly read and referred to by the profession. The celebrity and usefulness of the work have endured to our own time; and notwithstanding the prodigious accession of statutes and reports, the changes in the law, and the accumulation of publications, Littleton, with Coke's commentary, will ever continue a guide to student, advocate, and judge.

† Edward Lyttleton, of Mounslow, in the co. Salop, keeper of the great seal from 1649 to 1645. This learned personage, like his great ancestor, the author of the Tenures, attained fame, honours, and fortune by the profession of the law. In the 10th year of King CHARLES I., Mr. Lyttleton was appointed solicitor-general, when he received the honour of knighthood; in five years afterwards he was made lord chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the next year constituted lord keeper of the great seal, when he was elevated to the peerage, 18 Feb. 1640, as Baron Lyttleton, of Mounslow, in the co. of Salop. At the commencement of the civil wars, when CHARLES retired to the city of York, the lord keeper immediately followed his majesty with the great seal, and continued afterwards in attendance upon him. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of John Lyttleton, Esq. of Frankley, M.P. for the co. of Worcester, by whom he had an only dau. and heiress, Anne, who m. her second cousin, Sir Thomas Lyttleton, Bart. Of Lord Keeper Lyttleton, Banks says:—"His learning was various and useful; his skill in the maxims of government, and of the fundamental statutes and customs of the kingdom, was particular, as was his experience long and observing. His eloquence was powerful and majestic; in fact, such a man was worthy of that honour to which he was advanced, namely, of a peer of the realm." His lordship d. in 1645, when the barony of Lyttleton, of Mounslow, became extinct.

‡ The Speaker Littleton's immediate family was as follows: Adam Littleton, Esq. of Stoke Milburgh, in Shropshire, descendant of a younger son of Thomas Littleton, of Spetchley, was created a baronet, 14 Oct. 1642; he m. Audrey, dau. and eventual heiress of Thomas Poyntz, Esq. of North Skynden, in Essex, and dying about 1647, left a son, SIR THOMAS LITTLETON, who m. his cousin, Anne, dau. and heiress of Lord Lyttleton, of Mounslow, the lord keeper, and dying in April, 1681, was succeeded by his son, SIR THOMAS LITTLETON, Speaker of the House of Commons, temp. WILLIAM III., who m. Anne, dau. of Benjamin Baun, Esq. of Westcote, in Gloucestershire, but died without issue, in Jan., 1710, when the baronetcy became extinct.

HAVELOCK, SIR HENRY-MARSHMAN, Bart., V.C., C.B., colonel in the army, son of the famous Major-General Henry Havelock, K.C.B.; b. 6 Aug. 1830; created a Baronet, 22 Jan. 1858, with remainder, in default of issue male, to the heirs male of the body of his father.

Sir Henry Marshman Havelock was with his father in Persia, and, as his deputy assistant-adjutant-general, shared in all the toils and engagements of the glorious march to the relief of Lucknow. He was twice severely wounded, once on the 25th Sept., and again on the 19th Nov. 1857. He obtained the Victoria Cross for his conduct at the battle of Cawnpore; and was at the storming of the Imambarrah and the capture of the Kaiser Bagh, when Lucknow was finally taken, in March, 1858; and also at the routing of the enemy in Azinghur, in the following April. He was appointed second in command of the 3rd regiment Hudson's Horse, in Bombay, and was a capt. 18th regiment. Lineage.

WILLIAM HAVELOCK, Esq., of Sunderland, was the scion of an old family of the co. of Durham, which has existed there since the time of the Danes; he m., and, with other issue (his dau., Ifmah, m. Robert Allan, Esq., of the family of Allan, of Blackwell Grange, co. Durham, and d. 9 Jan. 1837, aged 70), had a son,

WILLIAM HAVELOCK, Esq., of Ingress Park, Kent, who m. Jane, dau. of John Carter, Esq., of Yarn, Yorkshire (by his wife, Elizabeth, a dau. of the old and distinguished house of Ettrick, of High Barnes, co. Durham), and had issue (with three daus., viz., Helen, d. 1825; Jane, m. to the late Capt. William Creek, R.N.; and Isabella, m. to John Moore Cave, Esq., and d. 1825) four sons,

William, a lieut.-col. in the British service and K.H., who was wounded at the battle of Waterloo, where he acted as aide-de-camp to Baron Alten, and where he "was one of the most chivalrous officers of the service." He fell gloriously at the head of his regiment, the 14th Light Dragoons, in their desperate but successful charge on the Sikh army, at Rombugger, the 22d Nov. 1848. He m. Caroline-Elizabeth, dau. of Acton Chaplin, Esq., and by her (who d. 6 May, 1806, at Neighley Hills, India) had issue to survive, William-Henry, Bombay Civil Service; Acton-Chaplin, lieut. in the East Indian service; Arthur, lieut. 2dnd foot; Charles; Caroline, d. 18 Oct. 1808; and Pauline, m. to Capt. Currie.

HENRY, of whom presently.

Thomas, who served in Spain under Sir Do Laey Evans, and d. there of fever, at Vittoria, vana. in 1806.

Charles-Frederick, a lieut.-col. in the British army, and Major-General of Leeva Pacha in the Imperial Ottoman army, with the Order of Mejidie. This gallant officer, who has achieved much military fame, especially as a leader of cavalry, was b. at Ingress Park, 16 Oct. 1803, entered a cornet in the 16th Lancers in 1823, and went with his regiment the next year to India. His career there was long and glorious, being, during a period of more than twenty years, literally engaged in every Indian battle from the capture of Dhurpore to the victory of Googdar. He has medals or clasps for each engagement: he has them for Dhurpore, Ghuznee, Tezeen, Cabul, Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Sobraon, and Goojerat. He was severely wounded at Ferozeshah. He became a lieut.-col. in 1834, when he joined the Irregular Ottoman Cavalry, and served as its brigadier-gen. till the peace with Russia in 1856. m. Charles Havelock m. 14 May, 1833, Mary, 2nd dau. of James Weynys, Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service, and has had issue (with four daus., viz., Mary, m. 1856, to J. Bensley Thornhill, F.I.C.'s Civil Service, which gentleman was mortally wounded, 26 Sept. 1857, at Lucknow, while rescuing from the enemy Sir H.-M. Havelock, the present bart., who was struck by a shot; Isabella; Emma-Ettrick; and Jane, d. young, 1845) an only son, Charles-Weynys, b. 16 Feb. 1834, lieut. 12th Bengal Irregular Cavalry, killed 11 April, 1858, in a skirmish with the rebels at Azimghur, while gallantly commanding the only detachment of his regiment which (through his influence) remained faithful to its colours.

The 2nd son,

SIR HENRY HAVELOCK, b. at Bishopwearmouth, co. Durham, 5 April, 1795, one of the most eminent soldiers of his time, was educated at the Charterhouse, and was originally a student of the Middle Temple. He became an officer in the British rifle-brigade in 1815, and went first to India in 1823. He there took an active part in the first Burmese war. He was a captain in 1838; and was at the storming of Ghuznee, and the occupation of Cabul; he was also at the forcing of the Cabul Pass and the battle of Tezeen; and he commanded the right column in the sortie from Jellalabad and final victorious attack on Akbar the 7th April, 1842, for which he was made a major and a C.B. After various other services, he became a lieut.-col. in 1841, and went through the Sikh war, being present at the victories of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, and Sobraon. In the late Persian war he was appointed to head the second division, and commanded at the battle of Mohammerah. On his return to Calcutta, he was sent as brigadier-general to relieve Cawnpore and succour Lucknow, then sorely pressed by the savage and mutinous Sepoys. He consequently commenced, on the 7th July, 1857, that memorable march, unparalleled in history, where with only 1,400 British bayonets and eight guns, united to a small native force, and opposed to a countless mass of the enemy, when the slightest reverse would have been fatal, he proceeded victoriously through a country deluged with rain, from the 7th July to the 16th Sept., hurling back the foe in twelve severe engagements. Joined, on the 16th Sept., by Sir James Outram and a few more troops, he stormed Lucknow, and effected his junction with and relief of its garison. Then pent up in the Residency and its precincts at Lucknow, he and his band, with Spartan courage and more than Spartan success, held out for two months against all the efforts of the enemy until, by the advance of Sir Colin Campbell, on the 17th Nov. 1858, a victorious rescue was achieved. For these great services, as the news of them reached home, Havelock was made a major-general, the 29th Sept. 1857; and a K.C.B. the 17th Nov. 1857; and letters patent were directed, the 26th Nov. 1857, to create him a Baronet. The government also was about to grant an annuity of £1,000 for the lives of himself and his son; but the illustrious soldier did not live to obtain the baronetcy or pension. He was attacked with dysentery, brought on by the intense anxiety and fatigue he had undergone, and he died at the Dikooksa, near Lucknow, 24 Nov. 1857, and was interred the next day in the Alum-bagh. Sir Henry Havelock was the author of a History of the Burmese War, and of the War in Afghanistan. Sir Henry m. 9 Feb. 1829, Hannah Shepherd, dau. of the Rev. Joshua Marshman, D.D., of Serampore, and has had issue,

I. HENRY-MARSHMAN, created a BARONET.

II. Joshua, b. 11 Dec. 1831, capt. Bombay Staff Corps, assistant-commissioner under Sir John Lawrence, G.C.B., in the Panjab, m. 16 Dec. 1858, his cousin, Isabella-Louisa, 2nd dau. of the late Captain William Creek, R.N., and d. 24 Sept. 1864, having had HENRY, b. 15 Jan. 1860, and a son, b. 12 Sept. 1862.

II. Hannah-Jane.

III. Honoria, d. 15 Aug. 1861.

Sir Henry's widow, Hannah Shepherd, Lady Havelock, was, by Royal Order, dated 18 Jan. 1858, given the same style, title, place, and precedence to which she would have been entitled had her husband survived and been created a Baronet. An Act of Parliament, the 21 Vic. cap. 2, further grants an annuity for her life, of £1,000 to Hannah Shepherd, Lady Havelock, and a like annuity for life of £1,000 to SIR HENRY-MARSHMAN HAVELOCK, the present baronet.

This line of WYNNE is descended from a cadet of Gwedir, who, in consequence of some family misunderstanding, left Wales in the 16th century, and settled in London. Sir William Segar acknowledged this to be the true descent, by exemplifying to George Wynne (for so he signed his name), the ancestor of Lord Headley's family, the armorial ensigns of the WYNNES of Gwedir.

GEORGE WYNNE (to whom, being draper to Queen ELIZABETH, a patent of arms was granted in 1604) is the first member of the English branch of whom we find any particular mention. He was born about the year 1560, and d. in 1610. He m. Margaret Green, of London, and had,

EDMUND WYNNE, of Thornton Curteis, in Lincolnshire, who was b. in 1553, and d. in 1645. He m. Mary, dau. of Rowland Berkeley, of the city of Worcester, Esq., and sister of Sir Robert Berkeley, Knt., one of the judges of the court of King's Bench, by whom he had,

GEORGE, b. in 1607; of whom presently.

Rowland, an alderman of London, b. in 1609; d. in 1676. Mark, of Little Warley, Essex, b. in 1611; d. in 1699. Katharine.

Margaret, m. to Roger Fletcher, citizen of London.

Mary, m. to Thomas Glover, citizen of London.

Joyce, m. to John Ramsden, merchant in Hull.

Anne, m. to John Aynsworth, merchant of London.

The eldest son,

GEORGE WINN, Esq., served the office of high-sheriff of the co. of Lincoln, in 1657, and proved himself a steady friend to the monarchy and to his country during the civil contests which cast a cloud over the last days of the unfortunate CHARLES I.; for there is extant in his family a receipt of the date of the very year in which his majesty suffered, signed by a deputed person on behalf of the exiled prince, his son, from which it appears that George Winn contributed, with his brother Rowland, the sum of 2000 guilders (a sum, perhaps, in those days not inconsiderable, and certainly not advanced without serious personal risk), towards the support of what might have been considered a hopeless cause. In the December following the Restoration, the title of Baronet was conferred by CHARLES II. on his faithful subject, as Sir George Winn, of Nostell, in the co. of York. Sir George was m. thrice; 1st, to Rachel, dau. of John Turner, of Ham, Surrey, Esq., by whom he had no issue; 2ndly, to Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Jeffreys, Esq., alderman of London, by whom he had,

1. EDMUND, his successor, b. in 1644, served as high sheriff of Lincolnshire in 1671. Sir Edward was twice married, and by his 2nd wife, Katharine, had issue three sons and three daus., viz., 1 Sir Rowland, his successor; 2 Edmund, of Ackton, in the county of York, Esq., who was bapt. 2 Dec. 1678 (the grandfather of the last Sir Edmund-Mark Winn); and 3 George, a Smyrna merchant, who was bapt. 19 Aug. 1680, and d. unm. in 1708. The daus. were 1 Elizabeth, who m. 1st, Joseph Taylor, of the Inner Temple, Esq.; and 2ndly, Dr. Charles Trimmell, bishop of Winchester; 2 Katharine; and 3 Sarah; who both d. unm. Sir Edmund d. 30 Aug. 1694. His eldest son,

SIR ROWLAND WINN, of Nostell, the 3rd baronet, was b. 1 July, 1675, and m. Letitia, dau. and co-heiress of William Harbord, Esq. (sometimes the English ambassador in Turkey), by whom he had issue three sons and four daus., viz., 1 SIR ROWLAND, his successor; 2 Edmund-Harbord, bapt. 8 May, 1709, who was a colonel of the 1st regiment of foot-guards, and d. unm. 25 May, 1763; and 3 Edward, bapt. 2 Nov. 1714, who d. unm. 1730. The daus. were, 1 Katharine, m. to Sir Samuel Barnardiston, of Ketton, in Suffolk, Bart.; 2 Letitia; 3 Anne-Elizabeth; and 4 Mary; all of whom d. unm. Sir Rowland and his wife both died at Bath in February, 1721. Their eldest son,

SIR ROWLAND WINN, of Nostell, the 4th baronet, b. in 1706, was high-sheriff of the county of York in 1732, and in the following year joint candidate with Charles Turner, Esq., in a very severe contest for the representation of that county in parliament, but owing to a misunderstanding between their friends Sir Rowland was unsuccessful. He m. in Aug. 1729, Susannah (sister of the 1st wife of Sir Edward Dering, Bart., and dau. and co-heiress of Charles Henshaw, of Eltham, in Kent, Esq., alderman and lord mayor of London, by his wife, Elizabeth, the only child and heiress of Edward Rooper, Esq., of the very ancient family of that name, settled at St. Dunstan's near Canterbury, and afterwards at Eltham aforesaid), by whom he had three sons and six daus., viz., 1 Sir Rowland, his successor; 2 Edward, of Bramham, in the county of York, who was bapt. 1 April, 1740, and d. unm. 13 Sept. 1732; and 3 Charles, bapt. 24 March, 1741, who d. an infant. The daus. were 1 Susannah; 2 Mary; 3 Charlotte, who all d. unm.; 4 Katharine, who m. Nathaniel Cholmley, of Whitby, in the county of York; 5 Elizabeth-Letitia, who was m.

to Sir George Strickland, 5th bart. of Boynton; and 6 Ann, who was the 1st wife of her cousin, George Winn, afterwards Lord Headley. Sir Rowland d. 23 Aug. 1765. His eldest son,

SIR ROWLAND WINN, of Nostell, the 5th baronet, was bapt. 24 Feb. 1739, and m. Sabine-Louise, only dau. and heiress of Jacques Philippe, Baron d'Hervert, governor of Vevay, in Switzerland, by whom he had a son, Sir Rowland, his successor, and a dau., Esther, who was b. 26 Nov. 1768, was twice married, and d. in Dec. 1803, leaving issue by her 1st husband, John Williamson, two sons and one dau., viz., John, Charles, and Louisa. Sir Rowland d. 20 Feb. 1785. The son and heir,

SIR ROWLAND WINN, of Nostell, aforesaid, the 6th baronet, was b. 13 June, 1775; served the office of high-sheriff of the county of York in 1799; and d. on the 13th of October, 1805, intestate and unmarried, on which event the family estates descended to his nephew, John (Williamson) Winn, Esq., whose brother and heir is the present CHARLES WINN, Esq. of Nostell, and the baronetage devolved upon his cousin,

SIR EDMUND-MARK WINN, of Aekton, in the county of York, the 7th baronet, who was b. 15 Aug. 1762; and d. in 1833, when the baronetcy devolved on his kinsman, CHARLES WINN, 2nd Lord Headley.

II. GEORGE, b. in 1645, whose grandson was raised to the Irish peerage in 1797, as Lord Headley.

III. Robert,
IV. Mark,
V. Rowland, } of whom no descendants now remain.

Sir George was m. 3rdly, to Anne, dau. of Sir William Pelham, of Brocklesby, in Lincolnshire, Knt., but by her he had no issue. He d. in 1667. At his death, his eldest son, EDMUND, s. to the title, which in 1805 devolved on his great-grandson, Sir Edmund-Mark Winn, of Acton, in the co. of York, the 7th baronet, at whose decease, in Aug. 1833, it fell to his cousin, the late and 2nd Lord Headley. Sir George, the 1st baronet's 2nd son,

GEORGE WINN, Esq., who was born in the year 1725, of whom it is the pride of his family to speak as an instance of rare success and celebrity under no common difficulties. He s. in 1763 to the estates of his cousin, Mark Winn, Esq. of Little Warley, in the co. of Essex, and in 1775, to those of his cousin, Charles Allanson, Esq. of Bramham Biggin, in the co. of York, who was the only son of the above-named William Allanson, Esq., and d. leaving no issue. Mr. Winn was created a Baronet, owing to the eminence of his talents and exertions as an English baron of the court of Exchequer in Scotland; and in the same year he obtained licence and authority to assume the name and armorial bearings of ALLANSON. In 1797, Sir George was raised to the peerage of Ireland, by the style and title of LORD HEADLEY, BARON ALLANSON AND WINN, of Aghadoe, in the co. of Kerry. ANDREW, Lord Herries, who obtained, on his father's resignation, a crown charter of the barony of Terregles and other lands, dated Feb. 1499-1500. The baronies of Terregles and Kirkgunzean, with other lands, were erected in his favour into a lordship, called the barony of Herries, to be held by Andrew and his heirs of the crown, by a royal charter, dated 18 April, 1510. Andrew, Lord Herries, sat as a Lord of Parliament, in Parliament, on 3 Feb. 1505-1506. He was slain at the battle of Flodden, 9 Sept. 1513, and was s. by his only son,

* During the proceedings in the House of Lords upon the claim of Lord Herries, it was alleged that the original barony of Herries was limited to heirs male, and that Sir John Maxwell was created Lord Herries, and did not enjoy the ancient barony in right of his wife. It would, however, appear that, according to the then state of the law, Sir John Maxwell could not have borne the title of Herries if the heir male had been entitled to a dignity of the same name. In the proceedings in council regarding the precedence of the Earl of Nithsdale, on the 11th Jan. 1621, it was laid down as undoubted law that two peers could not bear the same title, and the lords commissioners for exercising the office of earl marshal, in the case of Sarsfield, created Viscount Kingsale in Ireland, came to the same decision on the 19th April, 1627, and their report was confirmed by the King. This point was not adverted to in the judgments pronounced in the Herries's case, but it appears to afford an additional reason in favour of the decision.

Sir Edward was sheriff of Devon in the 25th ELIZABETH. He m. Mary, dau. of Mr. Justice Walsh, of the court of Common Pleas, and was s. by his son,

In Feb. 1672-3, he was unanimously chosen speaker of the Long Parliament, on the resignation of Sir Job Charleton. In the April following he was sworn of the privy council, and soon after made treasurer of the navy. POPHAM SEYMOUR, Esq., inherited the estates of his cousin, Edward Conway, Earl of Conway, who d. s. p., under the will of the said earl, dated 19 Aug. 1683; and assumed, in consequence, the surname of CONWAY. This gentleman fell in a duel with Colonel Kirk, 4 June, 1669; and dying atm., those estates devolved upon his next brother, FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Esq., who also assumed the surname and arms of CONWAY, and was elevated to the peerage, 17 March, 1702-3, as Lord Conway, Baron Conway of Rugby, co. Warwick Part of his extensive inheritance being situated in the north of Ireland, his lordship was created a peer of that kingdom likewise, 16 Oct. 1703, by the title of *Baron Conway, of Killulough, co. Lineage.

The surname of Hope is one of great antiquity in Scotland; and the ancestor of the present family,

JOHN DE HOPE, is said to have come from France in the retinue of Magdalene, Queen of JAMES V., in 1537, and settling in Scotland, left a son,

EDWARD HOPE, who was one of the most considerable inhabitants of Edinburgh in the reign of Queen MARY, and being a great promoter of the Reformation, was chosen one of the commissioners for the metropolis to the parliament in 1560. He left a son,

HENRY HOPE, a very eminent merchant, who m. a French lady, Jacqueline de Tott, and had two sons, Thomas and Henry.* The elder,

THOMAS HOPE, being bred to the Scottish bar, first attained eminence, in 1606, by his defence of the six ministers (clergymen) tried for high treason, for denying that the king possessed authority in matters ecclesiastical; and acquired, eventually, the largest fortune ever accumulated by a member of the legal profession in Scotland. He was subsequently appointed king's advocate, and created a Baronet of Nova Scotia 11 Feb. 1628. (See lineage of Sir Archibald Hope, Bart., the chief of the house of Hope, for a further account of this learned person.) Sir Thomas left a very large family, from the eldest son of which descend the HOPES of Craighall. The 6th son,

SIR JOHN HOPE, of Hopetoun, a member of the Scottish bar, marrying Anne, only dau. and heir of Robert Foulcs, of Leadhills, co. Sir John was appointed in 1641 governor of the Mint, and constituted a lord of Session in 1649. He m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Keith, eldest dau. and one of the co-heirs of William, 7th Earl Marischal. Sir John d. in 1661, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

JOHN HOPE, Esq. of Hopetoun, who took up his residence at the castle of Niddry, the Barony of which he purchased from Lord Wintoun; and he also purchased, about the same time (1678) the Barony of Abercorn, with the office of heritable sheriff of the co. of Linlithgow, from Sir Walter Seton. Mr. Hope represented the shire of Linlithgow in parliament in 1684. He m. Margaret, eldest dau. of John, 4th Earl of Haddington, by whom he had a son, and a dau., Eleanor, who m. Thomas, 6th Earl of Haddington. His son,

CHARLES-HOPE, who was b. in the previous year, s. to the family estates, and was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 5 April, 1703, by the titles of Viscount Aithrie, Baron Hope, and EARL OF HOPETOUN. His lordship, a K.T., m. 1699, Henrietta, only dau. of William (Johnstone), 1st Marquess of Ammandale, and had thirteen children, of whom survived him two sons and six daus., viz.,

Lineage.

The original surname of this very ancient family was Tristram, and it is said to have been exchanged for the present one of ST. LAWRENCE, under the following circumstances:—A member of the house of Tristram, having the command of an army against the invaders of his native soil, attacked and totally routed them on St. Lawrence's day, near Clontarf, and assumed, in consequence of a vow made previously to the battle, the name of the saint, which his descendants have ever since borne. The sword with which this warrior fought and vanquished still hangs in the hall of Howth, where the family has resided since its first arrival in Ireland, a period of six centuries at least.

SIR AMORICUS TRISTRAM, the brother-in-law and companion in arms of Sir John Courcy, having in the year 1177, effected a landing at Howth, defeated the Irish in a pitched battle at the bridge of Ivora, and obtained the lands and barony (by tenure) of Howth, as a reward for his distinguished valour during the conflict. After this successful commencement, Sir Amoricus, with his brother-in-law, Sir John Courcy, reduced the whole province of Ulster; but in 1189, when Sir John was removed from the government of Ireland by RICHARD I., Sir Amoricus, who was then in Connaught, being attacked by O'Connor, the king of that province, and overwhelmed by numbers, himself and his whole party, consisting of thirty knights and two hundred infantry, perished to a man. "Thus died Sir Amorey Tristram, who, among a thousand knights, might be chosen for beauty and heroic courage, for humility and courtesy to his inferiors, yielding to none but in the way of gentleness." By the sister of Sir John Courcy, Earl of Ulster, Sir Amorey left three sons, the two younger of whom were slain on Good Friday, 1203, in assisting their uncle Courcy against Lacie's men, in the churchyard of Downpatrick; and the eldest,

SIR NICHOLAS FITZ AMOREY, 2nd baron, was obliged to content himself with the lands of Howth, and relinquished to religious houses the conquests of his father in Ulster. From this Sir Nicholas the barony descended uninterruptedly to

SIR ROBERT ST. LAWRENCE, the 15th baron; who was appointed 23 Feb. 1467, chancellor of the green-wax of the Exchequer; and constituted, 10 July, 1483, LORD CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND. His lordship m. Joan, 2nd dau. of Edward Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, by whom he had four sons and two daughters: and the deed of feoffment by which he settled all his estate on trustees for the uses and purposes of that marriage, and which contains most of the names of the prime nobility of England, as the lady's trustees, is duly enrolled in Ireland. By this marriage Lord Howth's descendants derived descent from EDWARD III., and became inheritors of the blood royal. The 2nd son, Thomas, was appointed, in 1532, attorney-general of Ireland; and in 1535, second justice of the court of King's Bench. He left an only dau., Margaret, m. to William, son of Patrick Birmingham, chief-justice of the King's Bench in 1530. Sir Robert was s. by his eldest son,

SIR NICHOLAS ST. LAWRENCE, the 16th baron. This nobleman, for his fidelity to HENRY VII., in the affair of Lambert Simnal, was presented by that monarch with three hundred pieces of gold, and confirmed by charter, dated 4 March, 1489, in the lands of Howth, &c. He subsequently attended the Lord-Deputy Kildare at the famous battle of Knocktough, in Connaught, fought against the Irish 19 Aug. 1504, when his lordship headed the billmen on foot. Sir Nicholas was made LORD CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND 10 June, 1509; and dying in 1526, was s. by his eldest son by his 1st wife, Genet, only dau. of Sir Christopher Plunkett, 3rd Lord of Killeen.

SIR CHRISTOPHER ST. LAWRENCE, the 17th baron; who was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD, 18th baron. This nobleman dying without male issue, in 1549, was s. by his brother,

SIR RICHARD ST. LAWRENCE, 19th baron, at whose decease without issue, in 1558, the lineal heirship of whatever honours accrued to the family of Lord Robert's intermarriage as above, with Joan, one of the co-heiresses of "the most illustrious and powerful Prince Edward, Duke and Earl of Somerset, Marquess of Dorset, and Earl of Moreton, by his wife, the noble Princess Eleonora, dau. and co-heiress of the most noble Lord Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick and Albermarle," (as the record has it,) devolved on Lord Richard's two nieces, ANNE, wife of B. Dillon, Esq. of Kep-poch, and ALISON, wife of John Golding,* Esq., while the Irish Barony of Howth passed over indubitably to the nearest heir male of the family, according to the usual course. This happened to be his brother,

- i. Dorothea-Frances.
- ii. Selina-Elizabeth-Anne.
- iii. Louisa-Arabella.

Lineage.

This illustrious house, so renowned in the cabinet and the field, derives its surname from the seaport of Hastings, in Sussex (the lastage of which its senior members farmed for many years from the crown), and deduces its pedigree from Robert de Hastings, Portgrave of Hastings, Lord of Filongley, in Warwickshire, and dispensator, or steward, to WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. The successor of this Robert was

WALTER DE HASTINGS, who became steward to HENRY I, as owner of the manor of Ashill, co. Norfolk, a grant from the crown, upon the condition of taking care of the naperie (table-linen) at the coronation. From this Walter descended HENRY, LORD HASTINGS, who m. Ada, 4th dau. of David, Earl of Huntingdon, by Maud, dau. of Hugh, sister and co-heir of Ranulph, Earl of Chester (see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage, article MESCHINES, Earls of Chester), and was s. by his only son,

HENRY, LORD HASTINGS, who, adhering to Simon Montfort, Earl of Leicester, against HENRY III, was knighted, and was made governor, by that nobleman, of the castles of Scarborough and Winchester in 1264; and in the following year of Kenilworth Castle. This feudal baron m. Joane, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of George de Cantilupe, Barons of Bergavenny; and dying in 1268, was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE HASTINGS, Lord Hastings and Bergavenny, seneschal of Aquitaine, and, in 1290, one of the aspirants to the Scottish throne in right of his grandmother, Ada, who was niece to MALCOLM IV. and WILLIAM THE LION, Kings of Scotland. This nobleman had summons to parliament from 1295 to the time of his death. He m. Isabel, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of Aylmer de Valence, Earls of Pembroke, by whom he had two sons and three daus.; the second of which daus., Elizabeth, m. Roger, Lord Grey de Ruthyn. His lordship m. 2ndly, Isabel, 5th dau. of Hugh Despenser, Earl of Winchester, and had two sons. He d. 9 March, 1312-13, and was s. by the elder son of the first marriage,

JOHN, LORD HASTINGS, Bergavenny and Welshford, governor of Kenilworth Castle in 1323; who d. in 1325, and was s. by his only son,

LAURENCE, who, upon the decease of his grand-uncle, Aylmer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, s. p., was created Earl of Pembroke, by patent dated 13 Oct. 1389; a dignity that expired with John, 3rd earl, who was accidentally slain in a tournament by Sir John St. John, at Woodstock. This terminated the elder branch of the noble house of Hastings; but a younger, deriving from

THOMAS DE HASTINGS, great-grandson of Walter de Hastings, steward to HENRY I. and elder son of William de Hastings, by his 2nd wife, Ida, dan. of Henry, Earl of Ewe, laid the foundation of the present Earldom of Huntingdon. From this Thomas lineally descended

SIR WILLIAM DE HASTINGS, Knt., who was nominated by EDWARD IV. master of the Mints at London and Calais, steward of the honour of Leicester, and of the manors and castles of Donnington, Higham Ferrers, and Daventry; and created by the same monarch, 26 July, 1461, Baron Hastings of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, when his lordship was installed a knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter. His lordship m. Catharine, relict of William, Lord Bouville and Harington, and dau. of Richard Nevil, Earl of Salisbury, by whom he had four sons and two daus. In 1465, we find this nobleman entering into an agreement with Dame Elizabeth Grey, late wife of Sir John Grey, Knt., and heir of Edward Grey, late Lord Ferrers, that he should have the wardship of her son, Thomas, afterwards Marquess of Dorset, on whose part it was stipulated that he should, within five or six years afterwards, marry the eldest dau. of Lord Hastings that might then be living. His lordship about this time undertook, in his capacity of master of the Mint, a new coinage of gold, consisting of pieces of eight shillings and fourpence sterling each, called nobles; other pieces of one-half; and a third, of one-fourth that value. For several years afterwards Lord Hastings was one of the most powerful persons in the kingdom. In 1474, he obtained a license from EDWARD IV. to impark three thousand acres of laud and wood in Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and he accordingly built, at Ashby, a magnificent castle for the residence of his family, which it continued to be for two hundred years. This castle was afterwards remarkable as the temporary prison of MARY, Queen of Scots. Of his lordship FULLER says: "The reader needeth not my dim candle to direct him to this illustrious person, whom King EDWARD IV., or rather Edward Plantagenet (because more in human than in his royal capacity), so delighted in that he made him his lord-chamberlain, Baron Hastings of Ashby-de-la-Zouch," &c. Lord Hastings fell a victim, eventually, to the Protector Gloucester (RICHARD III), and was beheaded in the Tower, 13 June, 1483, when his estates were confiscated, but soon afterwards restored, partly by RICHARD and the remainder by HENRY VII., to his son,

EDWARD, K.B., 2nd baron; who having m. Mary, dau. and sole heir of Thomas, Baron Hungerford, Botreaux, Moulins, and Moels, had been summoned to parliament, 15 Nov. 1482, as Lord Hungerford. By this union his lordship had a dau., Anne, who became the wife of Thomas Stanley, Earl of Derby, and after his decease, of John Radcliffe, Lord Fitz-Walter; and a son, his successor, at his demise, 8 Nov. 1507,

GEORGE, 3rd baron. This nobleman attended HENRY VIII., in 1513, at the taking of Terouenne and Tournay, and was created by that monarch, 3 Nov. 1529, EARL OF HUNTINGDON. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Henry Stafford, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, and widow of Sir Walter Herbert, Knt.; and dying 21 July, 1544, was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS, 2nd Earl, K.G.; who m. Katherine, dau. and co-heir of Henry Pole, Lord Montagu, and granddau. of Margaret, Countess of Salisbury (which Margaret was dau. and sole heir of George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, brother of EDWARD IV.). On New Year's day, 1553, we find this nobleman presenting to EDWARD VI., in a purse of red silk, five sovereigns and eight half-sovereigns; and receiving in return a gilt cup and cover, weighing twenty ounces. His lordship d. 20 June, 1561, having had six sons and five daus.; of the youngest dau., the beautiful Lady Mary Hastings, the following circumstance is related: "John Vassilivich, Grand Duke and Emperor of Russia, having a desire to marry an English lady, was told of the Lady Mary Hastings, who being of the blood royal, he began to affect; whereupon making his desires known to Queen ELIZABETH, who did well approve thereof, he sent over Theodore Pissenskoie, a nobleman of great account, his ambassador, who, in the name of his master, offered great advantages to the queen in the event of the marriage. The queen hereupon caused the lady to be attended with divers ladies and young noblemen, that so the ambassador might have a sight of her, which was accomplished in York House Garden, near Charing Cross, London. There was the envoy brought in her presence, and casting down his countenance, fell prostrate before her, then rising, with his face still towards her (the lady with the rest admiring at his strange salutation), he said, by his interpreter, "it sufficed him to behold the angelic presence of her who, he hoped, would be his master's spouse and empress." The alliance did not, however, take place, and the lady d. unm. Of the earl's sons,

HUNTLY.

HUNTLY, MARQUESS AND EARL OF (Charles Gordon), Earl of Enzie, Earl of Aboyne, Viscount Inverness, Baron of Badenoch, Lochaber, Strathavon, Auchindoun, Balmore, Garthie, and Kincairdine, in the peerage of Scotland; and Baron Meldrum, of Morven, in the co. of Aberdeen, in that of the United Kingdom; Premier Marquess of Scotland; b. 5 March, 1847; s. his father, as 11th Marquess, 18 Sept. 1863.

Etymology.

Although there are numerous histories of this illustrious family extant, yet the historians do not coincide as to its origin and first settlement in Great Britain. Some bring the Gordons from Greece to Gaul, and thence into Scotland, at least a thousand years ago; while others convey them from Spain, Flanders, &c. The more probable conjecture, however, is, that some of these Gordons came into England with WILLIAM, Duke of Normandy, and into Scotland with King MALCOLM CANMORE. Indeed, there is a tradition in North Britain that the first of the name who crossed the Tweed was a valiant knight, a favourite of MALCOLM's, who, having killed a wild boar that greatly infested the borders, obtained a grant of lands in the Merse, or Berwickshire, which he called Gordon, after his own surname, and settling there, assumed the boar's head for his armorial bearing, in commemoration of the exploit. Be the early origin, however, what it may (and there is no doubt that it was distinguished), the noble family of which we are about to treat deduces its direct maternal descent from

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, Knt., who obtained in the 28th year of DAVID II. a charter, dated 20th March, 1357-8, confirming the donation which ROBERT I. had made to his grandfather, Sir Adam de Gordon, of the lands of Strath-bogie, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, who obtained a confirmatory charter of the same lands from ROBERT II., dated 16 June, 1376. In the next year, the Earl of March having attacked and burned the town of Roxburgh, the English borderers retaliated on the lands of Sir John Gordon, who, passing the border, encountered Sir John de Lilburn, and after a desperate affray, defeated him at Carham. Sir John Gordon had also a chief hand in the defeat and capture of Sir Thomas de Musgrave, governor of Berwick, in 1378, after a severe conflict. Sir John fell, eventually, at the battle of Otterburn, in Aug. 1388, leaving a son,

SIR ADAM GORDON, Knt. of Huntly, who was slain in 1402, at the battle of Homildon, and was s. in his estates by his only dau. (by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William de Keith, great-marshal of Scotland),

ELIZABETH GORDON, who m. Alexander Seton (2nd son of Sir William Seton, of Seton), and obtained, in conjunction with her husband, from Robert Duke of Albany, a charter, dated 20 July, 1408, to their joint heirs, and in default, to the heirs of the said Elizabeth, of the baronies of Gourdon and Huntly, and thenceforward the said Alexander was styled Lord of Gordon and Huntly. Of this marriage there were two sons and a dau.,

ALEXANDER. William, ancestor of the SETONS of Meldrum. Elizabeth, m. to Alexander, Earl of Ross.

The eldest son, ALEXANDER SETON, Lord of Gordon and Huntly, was created, 1449-50, Earl of Huntly, with limitation to his heirs male by his 3rd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Crichton, chancellor of Scotland, such heirs assuming the surname and bearing the arms of GORDON. His lordship m. thrice; 1st, Jane, dau. of Robert, son and heir of William, 1st Earl Marischal, by whom he acquired a great estate, but had no issue; 2ndly, Egidia, dau. and heir of Sir John Hay, of Tullibody, by whom he had a son, Sir Alexander Seton, who s. to his mother's estates, and was progenitor of the SETONS of Touch. The earl m. 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. of Lord Crichton, by whom he had (with other children) his successor,

Lord Huntly m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Erroll, and relict of Patrick, master of Gray, and dying in 1470, was s. by his eldest son,

ALEXANDER, 3rd earl, who m. 1st, Lady Johanna Stewart, eldest dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, by whom he had, with other issue,

William, bishop of Aberdeen. Alexander, Laird of Strathaven, ancestor of the GORDONS of Cluny, and of Major-Gen. Patrick Gordon, governor of Pennsylvania.

The earl m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Andrew, Lord Gray, and relict of John, 6th Lord Glamis. He d. in 1523, and was s. by his grandson,

GEORGE, 4th earl, who was constituted lord-chancellor of Scotland, and had the great seal delivered to him, 10 June, 1546. His lordship took an active part in the political affairs of his country during the reign of King JAMES V., the regency of that monarch's dowager, and the reign of the unfortunate MARY, his daughter; and having taken up arms in the feuds which then agitated Scotland, he was defeated by his rival, the Earl of Moray, at Corriebie, near Aberdeen. The consequences of the loss of this battle were most disastrous to the family of Huntly. The earl himself, thrown from his horse and too unwieldy to rise from the ground, was smothered in the retreat, 28 Oct. 1562; and his body, brought to town on a pair of panniers, was afterwards produced in parliament, when a doom of forfeiture was pronounced against him and his family, which was not reversed until 19 April, 1567. His son, Sir John Gordon, condemned to be beheaded, was butchered at Aberdeen by an unskilful executioner. The earl was s. by his eldest surviving son (by Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Robert, Lord Keith, and sister of William, 4th Earl Marischal).

GEORGE, 5th earl. This nobleman, after the unhappy death of his father, was tried for high treason in 1563, sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered. He was, however, pardoned by the Queen, and appointed lord-chancellor of Scotland in 1565. His lordship m. Lady Anne Hamilton, dau. of James, Earl of Arran, Duke of Chatelherault, Regent of Scotland; and dying in May, 1576, was s. by his only son,

GEORGE, 6th earl, who was created, 17 April, 1599, MARQUESS OF HUNTLY, and acquired also, between 1608 and 1625, the dignities of Baron of Badenoch, Lochaber, Strathavon, Auchindoun, Balmore, Garthie, and Kincardine, Viscount Inverness, and Earl of Erzie. His lordship m. Lady Henrietta Stewart, eldest dau. of Esme, Duke of Lennox, by whom he had issue,

- i. GEORGE, 2nd marquess.
- ii. JOHN (Sir), created Viscount Melgum and Lord Aboyne, 1627; m. Sophia, dau. of Francis, 9th Earl of Errol, and was accidentally burnt to death in the house of Frendraught; he d. s. p.

- iv. Alan, laird of Auchindoun.
- v. Anne, m. to James, Earl of Murray.
- vi. Elizabeth, m. to Alexander, Earl of Linlithgow.
- vii. Mary, m. to William, Marquess of Douglas.
- viii. Jean, m. to Claude Hamilton, Lord Strabane.

The Marquess of Huntly was heard to say, that he never drew a sword in his own quarrel. "In his youth, a prodigal spender; in his old age more wise and worldly; yet never counted for cost in matters of credit and honour; a great householder; a terror to his enemies, whom he ever, with his prideful ken, held under subjection and obedience; just in all his bargains, and never heard for his true debt; he was mightily envied by the kirk for his religion, and by others for his greatness, and thereby had much trouble." His master, King JAMES, loved him dearly, and he was a good and loyal subject to that prince. He d. 16 June, 1636, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE, 2nd marquess. His lordship was a staunch adherent of the unfortunate CHARLES I., and was beheaded in consequence, 30 March, 1649. He m. Lady Anne Campbell, dau. of Archibald, 7th Earl of Argyll, and had (with daus.),

Lineage.

This family (one of the few native houses at present to be found in the peerage of Ireland*) deduces its descent

* Mr. O'Donoghue, in his able Historical Memoir of the O'Briens, thus introduces the subject in his opening chapter:—"It has been the fortune of the race of O'Brien to form an exception to those instances in which families once occupying a regal station have, after their declension, sunk into obscurity. A reader of Irish history will find the names of the O'Briens so often mentioned in the pages of its annals, that he cannot hesitate to conclude, that whether as kings of the whole island, or later, of the southern half, or again, after the arrival of the Anglo-Normans, ruling their restricted principality of Thomond with independent authority, as asserted by Sir John Davis of them and others, the descendants of Brian Borioimhe have written their names in indelible characters in the history of their country. In no part of the kingdom can so many memorials of the energy and power of the native princes be found at this day, as in the territory of Thomond, before it was restricted to the present county of Clare. The erection of the monasteries of Minister-nough, Holycross, the cathedral of Limerick, the abbey of Emis, and many others, too numerous to mention, devoted to the promotion of learning and piety, exhibit to the modern traveller proofs of the genius and vigour of the descendants of Brian. And notwithstanding the various changes which the state of society has for so many ages undergone, and the downfall of so many of the ancient families of the country, we find the descendants of Brian the Tributes still holding their own, while we may search in vain even amongst some of the royal houses on the continent of Europe for a line of greater antiquity, or one whose descent is more clearly traced through the historic records of their country, than that of which this work purports to record the history."

Of the titles granted to the O'Brien family:—The Earldom of Thomond, in Ireland, was first created by King HENRY VIII. by patent dated 1 July, 1543, in favour of Murrough O'Brien (the Thanist or Monareh) for life, with remainder to his nephew, Donough O'Brien, for his life, and by the same patent the BARONY OF INCHEQUIN was granted to the same Murrough, with remainder to the heirs male of his body. The Barony of Ibrackan, in Ireland, was by another patent of the above-mentioned date, 1 July, 1543, created in favour of Murrough's (the Thanist) nephew, Donough O'Brien with remainder to the heirs male of his body, and by the same patent the Earldom of Thomond was also recognized and granted to Donough for his life after the death of his said uncle, Murrough. Donough on his accession to the Earldom in 1551, obtained, on surrender of this latter patent, a new grant of the Earldom of Thomond from King EDWARD VI, by a fresh patent dated 7 Nov. 1552, with remainder to the heirs male of his body.

Both the Earldoms of Thomond and the Barony of Ibrackan became extinct (or possibly dormant) at the death, without issue in 1741, of Henry, 8th Earl of Thomond, and 7th Baron Ibrackan, to whom had been granted by Queen ANNE the Viscounty of Tadcaster, in the peerage of Great Britain, by patent dated 19 Oct. 1714, with remainder to the heirs male of his body, and this Viscounty also became extinct at his death. The Viscounty of Clare, in the peerage of Ireland, created 11 July, 1662, was forfeited by the outlawry of Daniel, 3rd Viscount Clare, 11 May, 1691.

The Barony of Thomond of Taplow, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, created 2 Oct. 1801, expired at the death, without issue male in 1808, of Murrough, 1st Marquess of Thomond, to whom it had been granted with remainder to the heirs male of his body.

The Barony of Tadcaster, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, created 3 July, 1826, expired at the death, without issue male in 1846, of William, 2nd Marquess of Thomond, to whom it had been granted with remainder to the heirs male of his body. The Marquessate of Thomond, created 29 Dec. 1800, and the

from the royal line of Thomond, a race of princes of whom was the celebrated Hibernian monarch, BRIAN BOROHME, who commenced his reign in 1002, and terminated it with his life at the battle of Clontarf, in 1014. The last of those princes,

CONNOR O'BRYEN, was inaugurated King of Thomond in 1528, d. in 1540, when his son Donough was set aside, and the principality usurped by his brother,

MURROUGH O'BRYEN, who surrendered his royalty to King HENRY VIII., and was in consequence by that monarch created by patent dated 1 July, 1543, Earl of Thomond for life, with remainder, for life also, to his deposed nephew, Donough O'Bryen. Murrough O'Erion was also created by the same patent Baron of Inchiquin, with remainder to the heirs male of his body. By another patent of the same date, 1 July, 1543, Murrough's nephew, Donough, was created Baron of Ibrackan, to him and the heirs male of his body; and the Earldom of Thomond, after recital of the previous grant, was again granted to Donough for his life immediately after the death of his uncle, Murrough. Earl Murrough d. in 1551, when the earldom of Thomond devolved, according to the grants in both patents, upon the said,

DONOUGH, 2nd Earl of Thomond, who surrendered his life patent to EDWARD VI, and obtained a new grant of the dignities formerly given to himself, with remainder to the heirs male of his body, by patent, dated 7 Nov. 1552. His only son, CONNOR, 3rd Earl of Thomond, m. twice, and by his 2nd wife only, Any, dau. of Turlogh-Mac-J-Brien, of Dooharra, had issue, viz., three sons, DONOUGH, 4th Earl of Thomond, TEIG, and DANIEL, created Viscount Clare, in 1662 (see as to Viscountcy of Clare, note infra). The eldest son, DONOUGH, 4th Earl of Thomond, called "the Great Earl," Lord President of Munster, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Gerald, 11th Earl of Kildare, and had two sons, HENRY, 5th Earl, and BARNABY, 6th Earl. He d. 5 Sept. 1624, and was s. by HENRY, 5th Earl of Thomond, who m. and left issue, five daus., his co-heirs. He d. 1639, and was s. by his brother BARNABY, 6th Earl of Thomond, who m. Mary, dau. of Sir William Fermor, ancestor of the Earl of Pomfret. This Barnaby was created Marquis of Billing by privy seal, 1645; but the great seal not being then within the royal power, the patent never passed. He was s. by his only son, HENRY, 7th Earl of Thomond, who m. 1st, Anne, his cousin, one of the five daus. and co-heirs of Henry, 5th Earl of Thomond, and by her (his 2nd wife died s. p.) had issue two sons. The elder, Henry, Lord Ibrackan, who d. vid. patris, 1678, m. Katherine, sister of Charles Lennox, last Duke of Richmond, of the Stuart family, heiress of the house of Lennox, and by descent, Baroness Clifton, and had issue, Katherine, m. Edward Hyde, 3rd Earl of Clarendon, whose dau. and heir, Theodosia, m. John, 1st Earl of Darnley, and carried the Barony of Clifton, by writ, 1299, into the family of Bligh. The younger son of Henry, 7th Earl of Thomond, HENRY-HORATIO, also (after the death of his elder brother) LORD IBRACKAN, d. vid. patris, 1690, having m. Henrietta, dau. of Henry Somerset, Duke of Beaufort, and had issue, HENRY, 8th Earl of Thomond. The 7th Earl of Thomond, d. 1690, and was s. by his grandson, HENRY, 8th Earl of Thomond, who was created, 1714, Viscount Tadcaster, in the Peerage of Great Britain; he m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir Charles Seymour, K.G., the 6th, and commonly called "the proud" Duke of Somerset, but by her, who d. 1734, had no issue; he left his estates to his kinsman, Murrough (afterwards Marquess of Thomond), great-nephew, and by marriage grandson and eventual heir of William, 3rd Earl of Inchiquin, with remainder to Percy Windham, Esq., youngest son of Sir William Windham, by Lady Katherine Seymour, youngest sister of his countess. Mr. Percy Windham eventually inherited and took the name of O'Brien, and was created Earl of Thomond 1756; but d. s. p. in 1774, when his title became extinct. Henry, 8th Earl of Thomond, and Viscount Tadcaster, d. 1741, when his viscountcy of Tadcaster expired, and his earldom of Thomond became extinct, or possibly dormant only *

Earldom of Inchiquin, created 21 Oct. 1654, became extinct at the death, without issue male, in 1855, of James, 3rd Marquess of Thomond, and 7th Earl of Inchiquin; while,

THE BARONY OF INCHIQVIN, which he inherited as 12th baron, and which had been created, as above stated, by the first patent of the 1 July, 1543, devolved on his lordship's kinsman and next heir-male, SIR LUCIUS O'BRIEN, BART., now 13TH BARON OF INCHIQVIN.

* The dormancy or extinction depends, in a great measure, on the existence of any descendants of the younger children of the 3rd Earl of Thomond. His 2nd son, Teig O'Brien, d. leaving issue, and some particulars may be here mentioned touching this same 3rd Earl of Thomond's 3rd son, Daniel O'Brien, and the

This nobleman, a military officer of great renown in the civil war, was somewhat at first fickle in his allegiance, and sided for a time with the parliament, but finally threw himself heart and soul into the cause of royalty, and did the king great service in Ireland; he had, however, to eventually yield to the parliamentary forces, and became an exile until the restoration of monarchy. During his sojourn abroad, his lordship was appointed lieutenant-general by the French king, and viceroy of Catalonia, upon the conquest of that province in 1654. The earl m. Elizabeth St. Leger, dau. of the president of the province of Munster, in Ireland, Sir William St. Leger, Knt., and by her (who d. 22 May, 1685) had (with three daus.) three sons, WILLIAM, his successor, and Charles and John, who both d. s. p., before their father. ISHAM, SIR CHARLES-EDMUND, of Lamport, co. Northampton, b. 16 Dec. 1819; s. his brother, as 10th baronet, Sept. 1846; m. 26 Oct. 1847, Emily, youngest dau. of the late Rt. Hon. Mr. Justice Vaughan, and his wife, Louisa, Dowager Lady St. John, and has had,

I. Louisa-Mary.

II. Emily-Caroline.

III. Isabel-Vere, d. 14 Feb. 1868.

Lineage.

This family is deduced with great probability from AZOR, who had the manor of Isham, co. Northampton, at the time of the COXQUEROR'S survey; father of ROGER DE ISHAM, one of the first benefactors of St. Andrew's Priory at Northampton; and traced from Roger's son, Henry, in a younger branch, through Robert, living 45 HENRY III., and Henry mentioned 3 EDWARD III. to ROBERT DE ISHAM, the estate having passed through the heiress of the elder branch to the family of Luffewick. Robert Isham d. in 1424, leaving a son,

ROBERT ISHAM, the first of the family that suppressed the De before his name, d. in 1424, leaving a son,

ROBERT, of the age of 22 years. He m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir to Aston of Knoston, alias Knuston, near Irchester, in Northamptonshire. He d. about the 14th of EDWARD IV., leaving, with other issue, an eldest son,

WILLIAM ISHAM, one of those gentlemen of Northamptonshire to whom RICHARD III. sent a letter, requiring a loan of £40. He m. Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Braunsparth, who d. 20 Sept., 18th EDWARD IV., and he d. 13 June, 2nd HENRY VIII. (1510), leaving,

THOMAS ISHAM, Esq. of Picheley. He m. Elena, dau. of Richard Vere, Esq. of Addington (by Isabella his wife, dau., and at length heir, to John Green, Esq. of Drayton), and sister to Sir Henry Vere, sheriff of Northamptonshire, 1st HENRY VII., who was the last heir male of that ancient and martial family, descended from Sir Robert de Vere, 2nd son of Aubrey de Vere, chief justiciary of England, and brother to Aubrey de Vere, first of the name, Earl of Oxford; his eldest dau. and co-heir, Elizabeth, became the wife of John, the 1st Lord Mordaunt, ancestor to the Earl of Peterborough. Thomas Isham had issue, EUSEBY, John, and Henry. Henry was in the unfortunate expedition of the Emperor CHARLES V. to Algiers, 1541. The eldest son,

EUSEBY ISHAM, m. Anne, eldest dau. of Giles Pulton, Esq. of Desborough, and Catharine his wife, dau. of Thomas Lovet, Esq., son, of Astwell, and had twenty children; of whom Gyles, Robert, and Gregory succeeded each other, and the 4th son, JOHN, was ancestor of the present bart. The eldest son,

GYLES ISHAM, Esq., settling at Picheley, in the first year of the reign of Queen MARY, was elected for the city of Peterborough, to the parliament summoned to meet at Oxford; and again to that held at Westminster, 4th and 5th of PHILIP and MARY. He d. 31 Aug. 1559, leaving by Mary his wife, three daughters. His next brother,

ROBERT ISHAM, was one of Queen MARY'S chaplains: he d. unm. 5 May, 1546, and was s. by his brother,

GREGORY ISHAM, who d. 4 Sept. 1558. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Matthew Dale, of Bristol, who, after his decease, had to her 2nd husband, William Roswell, Esq., solicitor-general to Queen ELIZABETH. By her he was father of Sir EUSEBY, Thomas, Mary, the 2nd wife (and by whom he only left issue) of Thomas Andrews, Esq. of Charwelton, who seems to be the sheriff of Northamptonshire, according to Camden, that attended on MARY, Queen of Scots, to her execution, at Fotheringhay Castle; and Elizabeth, m. to Henry Cave, Esq. of Ingarsby, in the co. of Leicester. The son and heir,

SIR EUSEBY ISHAM, Knt. of Picheley and Braunston, received the honour of knighthood from King JAMES I., at the Charterhouse. He d. 11 June, 1626, leaving by his wife, Anne, dau. of John Borlase, Esq. of Marlow, in Buckinghamshire, a large family of sons and daus. But we return to his first cousin, the ancestor of the 1st baronet,

JOHN ISHAM, Esq. of Lamport, 4th son of Euseby Isham, by Anne Poulton his wife, b. in 1525, who was made free of the city of London, and of the Mercers' Company (of which he became afterwards warden), in the 5th year of EDWARD VI. He was also governor of the English merchant adventurers in Flanders, and sheriff of Northamptonshire in 1581. The grandson of this gentleman,

This noble family deduces its descent from the ancient and honourable house of Villiers, seigneurs of L'Isle-Adam, in Normandy, and its establishment in England is fixed at the period of the Conquest.

SIR EDWARD VILLIERS (the 2nd son of Sir George Villiers of Brookesby, and half-brother of George Villiers, 1st Duke of Buckingham), having been employed, in 1620, as ambassador to Bohemia, was nominated, in 1622, through the interest of his half-brother, the Duke of Buckingham, president of the province of Munster, in Ireland, upon the decease of the Earl of Thomond. Sir Edward m. Barbara, eldest dau. of Sir John St. John, of Lidiard Tregeze, co. JOHNSTON.

JOHNSTON, SIR WILLIAM, of Johnston, co. Aberdeen; b. 1849; s. his father, as 9th bart., 3 Aug. 1865.

Lineage.

This is one of the most ancient families of the name of Johnston, and has always competed with the JOHNSTONS of Annandale for the chieftship.
 In an old genealogical history in the possession of the present Sir William Johnston, Bart., of that ilk, the first mentioned is STIVEN DE JOHNSTON (living in the reign of King DAVID BRUCE), a man of great learning, brother to the Laird of Annandale. From him descended in a direct line,
 GEORGE JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. Christian, dau. of William, 7th Lord Forbes, by whom he had six sons and seven daus., viz., 1 JOHN, his heir; 2 Gilbert; 3 George; 4 Thomas; 5 Arthur, who went into Germany to finish his education, where he m. a lady of noble family; he was a man of erudition, and having studied physic, became eminent in that profession, and was physician in ordinary to King CHARLES I.; he was principal of Marischal College, Aberdeen, and holds amongst the Latin poets of Scotland the next rank to the elegant Buchanan; he d. at Oxford, whilst attending King CHARLES I.; 6 William. George Johnstone of that ilk d. in 1590, and was s. by his eldest son,
 JOHN JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. Janet, dau. of the Laird of Foveran, by whom he had two sons and two daus. He m. 2ndly, Katherine, dau. of Dundie of that ilk, by whom he had with one dau., two sons, 1 Thomas (in virtue of his mother's contract), Laird of Craig, from whom the present baronet is lineally descended; and 2 Gilbert. He was s. by his eldest son,
 I. SIR GEORGE JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Forbes of Tolquhon. Sir George was a man of great abilities and merit; and was, by King CHARLES I., created a Baronet, by his royal patent, "Domino Georgio Johnston de Caskieben, milite baronetto terrarum baroniae et regalitatis de Johnston, in Nova Scotia, in America," &c., dated the 31st of March, 1625. This Sir George was made sheriff of Aberdeen on the removal of George, 6th Earl of Huntly, anno 1630. By the above mentioned Elizabeth Forbes he had three sons and two daus.: he was s. by his eldest son,

II. SIR GEORGE, 2nd baronet of Johnston, who m. a dau. of Sir William Leslie, of Wardes, by whom he had an only son,

III. SIR JOHN, who entered when very young into the army, served in King WILLIAM's wars in Flanders, and was a captain at the battle of the Boyne. Whilst in London for a short time, with his friend the Hon. Capt. James Campbell, he was unfortunately induced to assist that gentleman in cloping with and marrying Miss Mary Wharton, a young and rich heiress, nearly related to Lord Wharton, the great favourite of King WILLIAM, who had interest to obtain a proclamation, offering a reward for apprehending them. Campbell escaped into Scotland; Sir John was taken and tried, condemned to death, and executed on 31 Dec. 1690. Sir John, having never been married, was s. by his cousin and heir male,

IV. SIR JOHN, who m. a dau. of the Laird of Thainston, and by her had one son and two daus. Sir John was strongly attached to the house of Stuart, and much averse to the union between England and Scotland, his nationality heightened by the recent execution of his cousin. He was particularly noticed by Charles Stuart on his arrival at Aberdeen, and accompanied him to Dunottar Castle, then the residence of the Earl Marischal. In conjunction with the earl and others in the north, he raised a force, and assembled his relations and retainers to assist in what he considered the right cause; and this act was fatal to his family and successors. In the year 1715 they took the field, and joined the Earl of Mar in the disastrous battle of Sheriffmuir; Sir John's son was killed by his side, and he dared not return home. He d. ten years afterwards at Edinburgh. Sir John was s. by his cousin,

V. SIR WILLIAM, of Craig and Bishopstoun, who m. Jean, dau. of John Sandilands, of Lord Torphichen's family, by whom he had, with three daus., two sons, WILLIAM, his heir; and Alexander, an officer in the navy, who perished with his whole crew on the coast of Scotland, off Stonehive. Sir William d. in 1750, and was s. by his son,

VI. SIR WILLIAM JOHNSTON, of that ilk. He entered early into the sea service, and had the command of a ship of war in the British navy. Upon the death of his father, he quitted the navy, came home, and purchased the lands of Hilltown, near Aberdeen. He m. 1st, Sarah, dau. of Thomas Kirby, Esq., a West India proprietor; and by her had one son, who d. in infancy. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Captain Cleland, of the Clelands of that ilk, and by her had six sons and five daus., WILLIAM, his heir, and Alexander, midshipman, who perished at sea; the other four sons d. in infancy; two of the daus. married: Mary-Selby, to Peter Gourlay, of the Island of St. Vincent; and Elmor-Sandilands, to the Rev. William Uvedale, of Barking, Suffolk, her cousin. After the death of Elizabeth, Sir William m. 3rdly, Amy, dau. of Newman Ffrench, of Belchamp, co. Essex, but by her had no issue. He d. in 1794, aged 82, and was s. by his son,

VII. SIR WILLIAM, of that ilk, who entered the army at an early age, and served in India during the war against the French, taking part in seven actions and the capture of several forts on the coast of Malabar. In 1798 he raised a regiment of fencible infantry for general service, "The Prince of Wales's Own," which was reduced at the short peace of 1802. Sir William m. 1st, Mary, dau. of John Bacon, Esq. of Shrubland Hall, co. Suffolk, lineally descended from the Lord Keeper Bacon, whose 3rd son was the great philosopher, Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Chancellor of England and Baron Verulam. He m. 2ndly, Maria, only dau. of John Bacon, Esq. of Fryern House, in the co. of Middlesex, the youngest son of a branch of the Shrubland family, settled in Cumberland in the reign of HENRY VIII., which numbers amongst its ancestors the celebrated Friar Bacon of the 12th century. JOHN DE JOHNSTONE, was witness to a charter granted by Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, before 1332. His grandson,

SIR JOHN DE JOHNSTONE, was a man of great eminence in the reign of King ROBERT II., and was warden of the West Marches in 1378. He d. in 1383. His son was,

His descendant in the 8th degree, Sir James Johnstone, of Johnstone, was created a peer, as Lord Johnstone, in 1633, and as Earl of Hartfell, in 1643, by King CHARLES I. By Lady Margaret Douglas, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Queensbury, he was father of James, 2nd Earl of Hartfell, who, in 1661, was by a new patent created Earl of Annandale and Hartfell, by King CHARLES II. Lineage.

The remotest ancestor of the family of Kenyon which can be traced is

JORDAN KENYON, lord of Kenyon, in the parish of Winwick, co. Lancaster, temp. HENRY III., which property was carried away by

ALMARICA KENYON, an heiress, who m. Thurston Holland, Esq. of Denton. On the occurrence of this event, the family of Kenyon removed to Park-head, near Blackburn; and thence to Peel Hall, on the marriage of

ROGER KENYON, Esq., with Alice, dau. and heir of George Rigby, Esq.; which mansion of Peel Hall is still in the possession of the Kenyons. Roger Kenyon's son, by Alice Rigby,

THOMAS KENYON, Esq., b. in 1668; m. 1st, Catherine, eldest dau. of Luke Lloyd, Esq. of Bryn, Hammer parish, co. Flint, by whom he had LLOYD, his heir; another son, who d. in minority; and two daus., Katharine, m. William Middleton, Esq., and d. s. p.; and Dorothy, m. 1716, to William Perceval, Esq. of Royton Hall. LLOYD KENYON, Esq., b. 1696, who s. as heir to The Bryn, &c. He m. in 1730, Jane, eldest dau. of Robert Edlowes, Esq. of Eagle Hall, co. Chester, and of Gredington, Flintshire, where the family of Kenyon settled. The issue of this marriage were,

LLOYD KENYON, Esq., the 2nd son, b. at Gredington, in Flintshire, 5 Oct. 1732, having received the elementary part of his education at Ruthin, in Denbighshire, was articled, at an early age, to Mr. W.-J. Tomkinson, an eminent attorney at Nantwich, in Cheshire. At the expiration of his articles, Mr. Kenyon determined to pursue the higher walk of the profession, and became, accordingly, in Trinity Term, 1754, a member of the society of Lincoln's Inn, by which he was called to the bar in Hilary Term, 1761. His subsequent success was slow, but not the less certain; and about the year 1773, we find him enjoying very considerable practice in the court of Chancery; his reputation was, however, firmly established in 1780, by his able defence, in conjunction with Mr. (afterwards Lord) Erskine, of Lord George Gordon. In 1782, soon after the accession of the Rockingham administration, Mr. Kenyon was appointed attorney-general, without serving the intermediate office of solicitor-general, and was constituted, at the same time, chief-justice of Chester. In March, 1784, he was appointed Master of the Rolls, and created a Baronet. Upon the Rolls' bench Sir Lloyd continued until the end of May, 1788, when he succeeded Lord Mansfield as lord-chief-justice of the court of King's Bench, and was elevated to the peerage (9 June, 1788) in the dignity of *Lord Kenyon, Baron of Gredington, co. Lineage.

This family was founded in Ireland by an eminent prelate of whom WARE, in his History of Ireland, speaks in the highest terms.

THE RIGHT REV. EDWARD KING, a native of Huntingdonshire, and D.D. in the university of Dublin, was consecrated Bishop of Elphin in 1611. He had a family of fifteen children, and yet, having found his bishopric the poorest, he left it the richest in all Ireland. He recovered its ancient possessions, which had been alienated by his predecessor; and that income which he found reduced to 200 marks, he left worth 1500*l.* a-year. Having thus reclaimed the possessions of his bishopric, and permanently augmented its revenues, his lordship voluntarily resigned the "quarta pars episcopalis" which his predecessors had enjoyed. For these and other praiseworthy actions, the lord-lieutenant (Strafford) mentions him with great honour in a letter to Archbishop Laud, and alluding to his patronymic, calls him "a truly royal bishop." His lordship was twice married. His 1st wife was Anne, dau. of — Coxsed, Esq., by whom he had a large family. His lordship m. 2ndly, Grace, dau. of Nathaniel Sampson, Esq. of Leicestershire, whose father, Thomas Sampson, was a distinguished preacher, prebendary of St. Paul's, &c., and whose mother was niece of Bishop Latimer. By his 2nd wife, who survived him, his lordship had issue. His lordship adorned the bishopric of Elphin for twenty-seven years and three months, and dying 8 March, 1638, aged 63, was buried in his own cathedral, where his monument still remains. His will was nuncupative, was attested by the chancellor of his diocese, and proved on the 16th of March, 1639. His eldest son,

JAMES KING, of Charlestown, co. Roscommon, b. 6 Feb. 1610, and was probably, therefore, a native of England, like his father, for the latter did not receive the bishopric of Elphin till 1611. He held the rank of captain in the army, and filled the office of high-sheriff of Roscommon in 1673. He m. before the year 1634, Judith, dau. of — Rawson, Esq. of Dublin, by whom he had issue, Edward, b. 17 July, 1640, disinherited by his father; four sons who d. s. p.; and GILBERT, of whom hereafter, as heir of his father. Of the daus., Anne, m. Jasper Maguire, Esq.; Elizabeth, m. in March, 1662, to Captain Charles Dod, of Cnockbawn, co. Sligo, the 2nd son of Charles Dod, Esq. of Cloverley, Salop, ancestor of the present J.-Whitell Dod, Esq. of Cloverley, and Charles-Roger Dod, of London

(see BURKE'S Landed Gentry); and Martha, m. in 1677, to the Rev. Coote Ormsby, chaplain to the lord-lieutenant of Ireland. Captain James King d. in 1686-7. The family estates devolved upon his son,

GILBERT KING, of Charlestown, co. Roscommon, b. 15 June, 1658, M.P. for the borough of Jamestown. He m. Mary, dau. of Dominick French, Esq. of Dungar, co. Roscommon, who m. the dau. of John King, Esq. of Boyle. Mr. King had issue,

JOHN, of whom hereafter.

Oliver, in holy orders, appointed rector and vicar of Annaduffe, in the diocese of Kilmoure and Ardagh, 1 Feb. 1714. Gilbert.

KINGSALE, LORD (Michael-Conrad de Courcy), Baron Courcy of Courcy, and Baron of Ringrone, in the peerage of Ireland; b. 21 Dec. 1828; s. his brother as 30th and premier baron, 15 June, 1865. Lord Kingsale enjoys the hereditary privilege (granted by King JOHN to De Courcy, Earl of Ulster) of wearing his hat in the royal presence.

Lineage.

The family of Courcy claims alliance with most of the royal houses of Europe, paternally through the Dukes of Lorraine, and maternally through the ducal house of Normandy.

LOUIS IV., King of France, b. in 920; m. in 939, Gerberga, dau. of HENRY I., Emperor of Germany, by whom he had two sons, Lotharius, who s. to the French throne (and with whose son, LOUIS V. the race of monarchs descended from Charlemagne ceased); and

CHARLES, Duke of Lorraine, whose immediate descendant, ROBERT DE COURCY, was Lord of Courcy, in Normandy, in 1006, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD DE COURCY, who accompanied his sovereign,

WILLIAM, into England, and distinguishing himself at the battle of Hastings, participated largely in the Conqueror's spoil, having been allotted numerous lordships; amongst which was that of Stoke, co. Somerset, and thence denominated Stoke Courcy. His lordship d. in 1098, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT, as Lord de Courcy, in Normandy, and Baron of Stoke Courcy, in England. This nobleman was steward of the household to HENRY I. and to his dau. Maude, the empress; by the former of whom he was made one of the greater Barons of Westminster. His lordship m. Rohesia, dau. of Hugh de Grantmesnil, Lord of Hinckley, co. Leicester, and lord-high-steward of England, by whom he had five sons, and was s. by the eldest,

WILLIAM, Baron of Stoko Courcy, and dapifer to HENRY I. This nobleman having no issue, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT, Baron of Stoke Courcy, who temp. King STEPHEN, had a principal command at the battle of Northampton, against the Scotch. This feudal lord m. Avicia, dau. and co-heir of William de Meschines, Earl of Cambridge, and was s. by an only son,

WILLIAM, Baron of Stoke Courcy, and dapifer to HENRY II. This nobleman d. in 1171, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN COURCY, who having distinguished himself temp. HENRY II. in that monarch's wars in England and Gascony, was sent into Ireland, in the year 1177, as an assistant to William Fitz-Adelm, in the government of that kingdom. Sir John having prevailed upon some of the veteran soldiery to accompany him, invaded the province of Ulster with twenty-two knights, fifty esquires, and about three hundred foot-soldiers, and after many hard fought battles, succeeded in attaching that quarter of the kingdom to the English monarchy, for which important service he was created, in 1181 (being the first Englishman dignified with an Irish title of honour), EARL OF ULSTER. His lordship continued in high favour during the remainder of the reign of his royal master, and performed prodigies of valour in Ireland; but upon the accession of King JOHN, his splendour and rank having excited the envy of Hugh de Lacie, appointed governor of Ireland by that monarch, the Earl of Ulster was treacherously seized while performing penance, unarmed and barefooted, in the churchyard of Downpatrick, on Good Friday, anno 1203, and sent over to England, where the king condemned him to perpetual imprisonment in the Tower, and granted to Lacie, all the earl's possessions in Ireland. After his lordship had been in confinement about a year, a dispute happening to arise between King JOHN and PHILIP-AUGUSTUS of France concerning the Duchy of Normandy, the decision of which being referred to single combat, King JOHN, more hasty than advised, appointed the day, against which the King of France provided his champion; but the King of England, less fortunate, could find no one of his subjects willing to take up the gauntlet, until his captive in the Tower, the gallant Earl of Ulster, was prevailed upon to accept the challenge. But when everything was prepared for the contest, and the champions had entered the lists, in presence of the monarchs of England, France, and Spain, the opponent of the earl seized with a sudden panic, put spurs to his horse, and fled the arena; whereupon the victory was adjudged by acclamation to the champion of England. The French king being informed, however, of the earl's powerful strength, and wishing to witness some exhibition of it, his lordship, at the desire of King JOHN, cleft a massive helmet in twain at a single blow. The king was so well satisfied with this signal performance, that he not only restored the earl to his estates and effects, but desired him to ask anything within his gift, and it should be granted. To which the earl replied, that having estates and titles enough, he desired that his successors might have the privilege (their first obeisance being paid) to remain covered in the presence of his majesty, and all future kings of England; which request was immediately conceded. This heroic warrior and able statesman d. in France, about the year 1210, and was s. by his only son,

MILES, upon whom HENRY III. conferred, in 1181, the Barony of Kingsale, in Ireland, as a compensation for the Earl-dom of Ulster, which was retained by Hugo de Lacie. For five centuries afterwards, the honours descended regularly. The 18th lord,

JOHN DE COURCY, d. 25 July, 1625, leaving four sons, 1 GERALD, his successor; 2 Edmund, d. s. p.; 3 PATRICK; 4 David, whose son, Anthony of Bandon, co. Cork, d. in 1727, leaving three sons, Anthony, d. without male issue; Miles, lost at sea, in 1724; JOHN of Kilnaclowna, who inherited as 25th baron. The eldest son,

GERALD, 19th lord, d. without male issue, about the year 1642, leaving a dau. Mary, his heir-at-law m. 1st, to John Galway, of Kinsale; and 2ndly, to Donogh O'Driscall. His lordship was s. by his brother,

PATRICK, 20th lord; who d. about the year 1663, leaving four sons and three daus. JOHN, his successor; Edmund, d. s. p.; Miles, whose son, GERALD, s. as 24th lord; Gerald, d. s. p.; Alice, m. to Dermot MacCarthy, Esq. of English; Elizabeth, m. to David, Viscount Kilmallock; Margaret, m. to Philip-Barry Oge. The eldest son,

JOHN, 21st lord, d. about 1667, and was s. by his eldest son, PATRICK, 22nd lord; who d. s. p. and was s. by his brother,

ALMERICUS, 23rd lord; outlawed in 1691, for his adhesion to the fortunes of JAMES II.; but the outlawry was very soon removed and his lordship took his seat in the parliament of Ireland in 1692. This nobleman, in observance of the ancient privilege of his house, appeared in the presence of King WILLIAM covered, and explained to that monarch, when his majesty expressed surprise at the circumstance, the reason, thus:—"Sire, my name is Courcy; I am Lord of Kingsale, in your majesty's kingdom of Ireland; and the reason of my appearing covered in your majesty's presence, is to assert the ancient privilege of my family, granted to Sir John de Courcy, Earl of Ulster, and his heirs, by JOHN, King of England." The king acknowledged the privilege, and giving the baron his hand to kiss, his lordship paid his obeisance, and continued covered. He d. in 1719, without issue, leaving MARGARET, wife of William Ireland, Esq. his sole surviving sister and heiress. That lady's descendants are the IRELANDS of Low Park, co. Roscommon, and Robertstown House, co. Kildare. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) The peerage reverted to his first-cousin,

GERALD, 24th baron, grandson of Patrick, the 20th baron (being son of the Hon. Miles de Courcy, by Elizabeth, youngest dau. and eventually sole heir of Anthony Sadleir, Esq. of Arley Hall, co. Warwick). This nobleman, upon being presented to GEORGE I. in 1720, had the honour of kissing his majesty's hand, and asserting his ancient privilege. His lordship m. Margaretta, only dau. and heir of John Essington, Esq. of Ashlyns, co. Hertford, by whom he had,

in default of heirs male, to his brother, the Hon.
Arthur Kinnaird, and the heirs of his body; m. 14

Lineage.

The feudal barony of Kinnaird, in Perthshire, was conferred
(by charter) upon RADULPHUS RUFUS, or the Red, by WILLIAM the Lion, King of Scotland, when the family assumed the name of KINNAIRD. From this personage directly descended,

SIR GEORGE-PATRICK KINNAIRD, of Inchtute (an estate
which came into the family by the marriage of Reginald Kinnaird with Marjory, dau. and heir of Sir John Kirkaldy, of Inchtute, about the close of the 14th century), who, for his loyalty to the house of Stuart, was knighted by CHARLES II., in 1661; and elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 28 Dec.
1682, as BARON KINNAIRD of Inchtute, with limitation to the heirs male of his body. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of James Crichton, Esq. of Ruthven, and had six sons, of

barony devolved upon his uncle,

CHARLES, 5th baron. This nobleman m. about the year
1729, Magdalene, dau. of William Brown, merchant, of Edinburgh; and in eighteen years afterwards, without having had issue in the interim, Lady Kinnaird left Drim-mie House, 21 Sept. 1747; and his lordship announced to his friends that she had been delivered of twins, Patrick and Charles, 23rd of the same month. Mr. Kinnaird, the next heir, however, brought an action in the Commissary
Court for the purpose of establishing the surreptitiousness of these children; and Lord and Lady Kinnaird, refusing to answer the interrogatories directed to be put by the commissaries, it was decreed that his lordship should pay to
Mr. Kinnaird £600 for not appearing personally in court.
The affair terminated by Lord Kinnaird's declaring that

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM KEITH, Knt., was created Earl-Marischal of Scotland, by JAMES II., in 1453, which dignity passed in regular succession to

GEORGE,* the 10th earl, whose honours and estates fell under an act of attainder, in 1716, resulting from his lordship's adhesion to the Stuarts, in 1715. His lordship was for many years subsequently in the service of the King of Prussia; and his only brother, the Hon. George Keith, following his fortunes, distinguished himself first in the Russian service, where he attained the rank of field-marshal, and had the command of the Russian army in the war of 1740. He was afterwards in the service of the King of Prussia. He fell at Hockrichon, 14 Oct. 1758; and a superb monument to his memory, at Berlin, records his achievements as the celebrated Marshal Keith.

THE HON. SIR JOHN KEITH, Knt., 3rd son of William, 6th earl-marischal, by Lady Mary Erskine, was elevated to the peerage, 26 June, 1677, by the titles of Baron Keith, of Inverary, and Keith Hall, and EARL OF KINTORE, having been appointed, in 1660, knight-marischal of Scotland, and that office settled hereditarily in his family, in consideration of the loyalty he had evinced in preserving the regalia of Scotland from falling into the hands of CROMWELL. Sir John Keith had those ensigns of royalty safely conveyed from Dumore Castle and deposited under-ground in the church of Kinneff; sailing immediately for France, it was supposed that he had carried them away; in consequence of which all further search by the Cromwellians was abandoned.† His lordship obtained a new grant of his honours in 1694, extending the reversion to his own female heirs, and to the male issue of his brother George. He m. Margaret, dau. of Thomas, 2nd Earl of Haddington, and was s. in 1714, by his only son,

WILLIAM, 2nd earl. This nobleman, joining the insurgents of 1715, was at the battle of Sheriffmuir, and never afterwards shaved his beard; he does not appear, however, to have suffered in consequence of his participation in the Rebellion, further than being deprived of the office of marischal. His lordship m. Catherine, eldest dau. of David, 4th Viscount Stormont, and had issue,

I. JOHN, } successive earls.
II. WILLIAM, }

i. Catherine, m. to David, 5th Lord Falconer of Halkertoun, and had, with other issue,

1 ALEXANDER, 6th Lord Falconer; who was s. in 1762, by his brother,

2 WILLIAM, 7th Lord Falconer; who d. in Dec. 1776, leaving a son and successor,

ANTHONY-ADRIAN, 8th Lord Falconer; of whom hereafter as 5th EARL OF KINTORE.

3 George, capt. R.N., father of GEORGE FALCONER, Esq. of Plesho.

His lordship was s. in 1718, by his elder son,

JOHN, 3rd earl; who d. s. p. in 1758, and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM, 4th earl. This nobleman dying unm. in 1761, the estates devolved upon George, the 10th and attained earl-marischal, while the peerage remained suspended until that nobleman's decease, in 1778, when it passed to

ANTHONY-ADRIAN FALCONER, 8th Lord Falconer, of Halkertoun, (revert to Catherine, dau. of William, 4th earl,

* George, 10th earl-marischal. This nobleman, who, as mentioned, was attained in consequence of his participation in the rising of 1715, had the good fortune to effect his escape into Spain, and thence removing into Prussia, obtained the confidence and friendship of FREDERICK III., who appointed him, in 1750, ambassador to France, invested him with the order of the Black Eagle, and constituted him governor of Neufchatel. In 1759, his lordship, being ambassador from Prussia to the court of Madrid, discovered the secret of the family compact, by which the different branches of the house of Bourbon had bound themselves to assist each other; and communicating the same to Mr. Pitt, that minister represented his case so favourably to GEORGE III., that his majesty granted his lordship's pardon in 1759; and an act of parliament passed in the following year to enable him to inherit estates, but he rejected the insertion of a clause overpowering his succession to honours. His lordship was further favoured by the crown, under the sanction of parliament, with a grant of public money in 1761. He died in 1778, at Potsdam, at the advanced age of eighty-eight, enjoying his Majesty of Prussia's confidence to the last, in so great a degree as to be called "the king's friend." An "Eloge de my Lord Marischal," by D'Alembert, was published at Berlin in 1779.

and her descendants), who inherited with it the estate of Kintore, the old castle of Hall Forest, given to the family by ROBERT I., and Keith Hall. The noble family of Falconer deduce their descent from Ramulphus (son of Walter de Luakyir), appointed king's falconer by WILLIAM the Lion, whence it assumed the surname of FALCONER. The descendant of Ramulphus, Alexander, son of Sir Alexander Falconer, was created Lord Falconer, of Halkertoun, 20 Dec. 1647; which dignity descended regularly to David, 5th Lord Falconer, son-in-law of John, 1st Lord Kintore. Tradition states that an ancestor of this principal family, as Nisbet calls it, possessed lands in Nithsdale in the beginning of the 9th century; but the first of its members upon record is,

IVONE KIRKPATRICK, obtained a confirmatory charter of the lands of Closeburne from ALEXANDER II., dated 15 Aug. 1232; and from him directly descended, through a long line of martial Lords of Closeburne,

This ancient family is lineally descended from SIR RAI-

LAMB, SIR ARCHIBALD, of Burville, co. Berks, lieutenant, 2nd life guards; b. 5 Nov. 1815, s. his grandfather as 3rd baronet, 21 March, 1860.

Lineage.

This family, deriving its surname from Bruges, in Flanders, is said to have fixed its abode near Reading, in the reign of HENRY VII.

COL. ROGER BURGESS, a gentleman of considerable fortune in the co. Berks, and a staunch cavalier, successfully opposed CROMWELL himself, by holding out for the king the town of Farington; of this affair an account is given in RUSHWORTH'S Historical Collections (1645). He was afterwards taken prisoner at the battle of Naseby. Eventually he succeeded to the command of Castle Cornet, and defence of the Island of Guernsey, in which he showed the greatest gallantry, and protracted it after the submission of every royalist garrison in the British dominions. This, however, and the fatal results of the battle of Worcester (1651), rendering further resistance useless, he finally surrendered to Colonel Bingham, but received the most honourable terms. His successor,

JOHN BURGESS, also a distinguished cavalier left, by Ann his wife,

JAMES BURGESS, of Greyslee, his successor, b. 1681. He d. in 1755, leaving, by Mary, his wife, dau. of Robert Jones, of Gulsfield, co. Montgomery, among other issue, JAMES—whose descendants are extinct, and,

LANSDOWNE, MARQUESS OF (Henry-Charles-Keith Petty-FitzMaurice), in the co. of Somerset, Earl of Wycombe, of Chipping Wycombe, co. Bucks, Viscount Caln and Calstone, co. Wilts, and Lord Wycombe, Baron of Chipping Wycombe, co. Bucks, in the peerage of Great Britain; Earl of Kerry and Earl of Shelburne, Viscount Clanmaurice and Fitzmaurice, Baron of Kerry, Lixnaw, and Dunkerron, in the peerage of Ireland; b. 14 Jan. 1845; s. his father as 5th marquess, 5 July, 1866.

Lincage.

The Earls of Kerry trace their origin to a common ancestor in the direct line with the houses of Fitzgerald, Windsor, Carew, McKenzie, &c., namely, Walter Fitz-Otho, Castellon of Windsor in the eleventh century; whose eldest son,

GERALD FITZ-WALTER, obtained a grant from HENRY I. of Moleford, co. Berks. This Gerald m. Nesta, dau. of Rees Gruffydd, Prince of South Wales, and had issue,

MAURICE FITZGERALD, ancestor of the house of Leinster. WILLIAM, of whom presently.

David, consecrated 1147, bishop of St. David's, and d. 1176. he 2nd son.

WILLIAM, called by Giraldus Cambrensis the eldest son; but the pedigree of the family of Leinster setting forth the contrary, and his being possessed of the castle of Karriu, co. Carmarthen, in South Wales, his mother's inheritance, and assuming that surname, bespeak him a younger son, which is confirmed by the unerring testimony of the addition of a chief, ermine, to his coat-armour (a certain sign of cadency, to distinguish him and his posterity from the elder branch of the family). This William was sent, in 1171, by Earl Strongbow, into Ireland, with his son, Raymond, where, for a time, he assisted in the reduction of that kingdom; but returning to his native country, died in the year 1173, leaving, by Catherine, dau. of Sir Adam de Kingsley, of Cheshire, seven sons and a dau. The eldest son,

REYMOND, surnamed, from his corpulency, Le Grosse, having, as stated above, accompanied his father into Ireland, was a principal in the reduction of that kingdom. He m. Baselia, sister of Earl Strongbow, and had, as a marriage portion with her, a large territorial grant and the constablership of Leinster. After this we find him aiding MacCarthy, King of Cork, against his rebellious son, Cormac O'Lehanagh, and acquiring for his services a large tract of land in the co. of Kerry, where he settled his eldest son,

MAURICE FITZ-REYMOND, who m. for his 1st wife, Johanna, dau. of Miles Fitz-Henry, founder of Conall Abbey, co. Kildare, and chief governor of Ireland, by whom he had a son,

THOMAS, who assumed the surname of Fitzmaurice, and became Lord of Kerry and Lixnaw. This Thomas founded the Grey Franciscan Priory and Ardferit, in 1253. He m. Grace, dau. of MacMurrough Cavenagh, son of DERMOID, King of Leinster; and dying in 1280, was s. by his eldest son,

MAURICE, 2nd Lord of Kerry; who sat in the parliament held at Dublin in 1295, and attended a writ of summons of EDWARD I., in 1297, with horse and arms, in an expedition against Scotland. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir John M'Leod, of Galway; and dying in 1303, was s. by his son,

NICHOLAS, 3rd Lord of Kerry; whose son, MAURICE, 4th Lord of Kerry, having a dispute with Dermoid Oge MacCarthy, killed that chief on the bench before the judge of assize, at Tralee, in 1325, for which he was tried and attainted by the parliament of Dublin, but was not put to death. His lands were, however, forfeited, but restored, after his decease, to his brother and successor,

JOHN, 5th Lord of Kerry, from whose time we are obliged, by our limits, to pass over nearly four centuries, and to come to

THOMAS, 21st Lord of Kerry, who was created, 17 Jan. 1722, Viscount Clanmaurice and EARL OF KERRY. His lordship m. in 1692, Anne, only dau. of Sir William Petty, physician-general to the army in Ireland, in 1652, so celebrated for his extraordinary talents and surprising fortune. In Dec. 1664, Sir William undertook the survey of Ireland; and in March, 1666, (aided by his friend Thomas Tylour, Esq., ancestor of the Marquess of Headfort), he had completed the measurement of two millions and eight thousand acres of forfeited lands; for which, by contract, he was to receive one penny per acre. This eminent person died of a gangrene in his foot, 16 Dec. 1687. He m. Elizabeth, Baroness Shelburne, dau. of Sir Hardress Waller, Knt., and left issue, Charles, created 1688, Baron Shelburne, d. s. p. 1696; Henry, created 1699, Baron Shelburne, and 1719, Viscount Dunkerron and Earl of Shelburne, d. s. p. 17 April, 1751; and Anne, wife, as stated, of the Earl of Kerry. By her the Earl of Kerry had,

- I. WILLIAM, who s. at his decease, 16 March, 1741, as 2nd Earl of Kerry. His lordship, who was a col. in the Coldstream foot-guards, left at his decease, in 1747, by his 2nd wife, Gertrude, only dau. of Richard, 4th Earl of Cavan, Anna-Maria, m. to Maurice Fitzgerald, Knt. of Kerry.

And an only son, his successor,

- FRANCIS-THOMAS, 3rd Earl of Kerry; who m. Anastasia, dau. and co-heir of Peter Daly, Esq. of Quansbury, co. Galway; but dying s. p. 4 July, 1818, his lordship's honours devolved upon his cousin, Henry, 3rd Marquess of Lansdowne.

- II. JOHN, of whom presently.

1. Elizabeth-Anne, m. to Sir Maurice Crosbie, of Ardferit, created Baron Brandon.
- II. Arabella, m. to Arthur Denny, Esq. of Tralee.
- III. Charlotte, m. to John Conway, son and heir of John Colthurst, Esq. of Ardrum.

Thomas, 1st Earl of Kerry's 2nd son,

THE HON. JOHN FITZMAURICE, having inherited the Petty estates on the demise of his maternal uncle, Henry Petty, Earl of Shelburne, in April, 1751 (when that earldom expired), assumed the surname and arms of PETTY, and was advanced to the peerage of Ireland, 7 Oct. 1751, as Baron Dunkerron and Viscount Fitzmaurice. His lordship was further promoted, 26 June, 1753, to the Earldom of Shel- burne. He m. in 1734, his first cousin, Mary, dau. of the Hon. William Fitzmaurice, of Gallane, co. Kerry, by whom he had issue, WILLIAM, his successor; and Thomas, who m. Mary, Countess of Orkney, a peeress in her own right. The Earl of Shelburne was created a peer of Great Britain, 17 May, 1760, as Baron Wycombe, of Chipping Wycombe; and dying 10 May, 1791, was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, 2nd Earl of Shelburne, a general-officer in the army, and a distinguished statesman in the reign of GEORGE III. In 1782, his lordship, after the decease of the Marquess of Rockingham (under whom he filled the office of secretary for foreign affairs), was appointed prime minister; and 6 Dec. 1784, advanced to the dignities of Earl of Wycombe, co. Bucks, Viscount Calne and Calstone, and MARQUESS OF LANSDOWNE, co. Somerset. The marquess m. 1st, in 1765, Sophia, dau. of John, Earl Granville, by whom he left one son, JOHN, his successor; and 2ndly, in 1779, Louisa, dau. of John (Fitzpatrick), Earl of Upper Ossory, by whom he had another son, HENRY, 3rd marquess, and a dau., Louisa, who d. young. His lordship d. in May, 1805, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN, 2nd marquess; who m. 27 May, 1805, Lady Gifford, relict of Sir Duke Gifford, of Castle Jordan, in Ireland, but d. without issue, 15 Nov. 1809, when the honours devolved upon his half-brother,

LORD HENRY PETTY, as 3rd marquess, who had already distinguished himself as an eloquent public speaker, and had attained considerable popularity by his enlightened views as a statesman. His lordship s. also, 4 July, 1818, to the honours of the house of Kerry, on the demise of his cousin (revert to descendants of William, eldest son and successor of Thomas, 1st Earl of Kerry). He was b. 2 July, 1780; and m. 30 March, 1808, Louisa-Emma, 5th dau. of Henry-Thomas, 2nd Earl of Ilchester, by whom (who d. 3 April 1851) he had issue,

- i. William-Thomas, Earl of Kerry, M.P.; b. 30 March, 1811; m. 18 March, 1834, Lady Augusta-Lavinia-Priscilla Ponsonby, 2nd dau. of John, 4th Earl of Bessborough, and d. 21 Aug. 1836, leaving by this lady (who m. 2ndly, in April, 1845, the Hon. C. Gore) a dau., Mary, m. 4 Oct. 1860, to Col. the Right Hon. Percy-Egerton Herbert, C.B., M.P., brother of the Earl of Powis.
- ii. HENRY, 4th marquess.

LAUDER.

LAUDER, SIR THOMAS-NORTH, Bart. of Fountain Hall, co. Haddington, lieut. 60th rifles, b. 28 April, 1846; s. his father as 9th baronet, 23 Mar. 1867.

Lineage.

The surname of LAUDER, anciently DE LAVEDRE, is of Norman origin, and the Scottish historians mention the first De Lavedre as one of those Anglo-Norman barons who accompanied MALCOLM CANMORE into Scotland in 1056, to assist that prince in recovering his kingdom from the usurper Macbeth; for this important service De Lavedre obtained from the king grants of lands, particularly in Berwickshire, to which he gave his own name, as other knights, similarly recompensed, did, in obedience, according to Boethius, of a direct royal command to that effect. De Lavedre was also invested with the hereditary bailiwick of Lauderdale. The next of the family of whom there is particular notice is

SIR ROBERT DE LAVEDRE of the Bass, the brave associate of Sir William Wallace, who had a charter from William de Lamberton, bishop of St. Andrew's, of that fragment of the island of Bass over which the abbey of St. Andrew's had until then retained a right, the Lauders having already possessed the larger part of it for some generations. This Sir Robert was ambassador to England from ROBERT I. upon various occasions. In 1223, he was one of the proxies in the oath of peace with EDWARD II., on which occasion he swore "on the soul of the Bruce" for its due maintenance by the Scottish king. He was justiciary of the Lothians and that part of Scotland to the south of the Forth, in 1328; and in 1333 he was present at the battle of Halidon, though he was then too old to dismount and take a part in the fight, which took place on foot. His son,

SIR ROBERT DE LAVEDRE, fought at Halidon in 1333. His descendant,

RICHARD LAUDER, of Lauder, was a senator of the College of Justice by the title of Lord Lauder; and as his successor was appointed in 1575, he must have died before that year. He m. Mary, dau. of MacDowall of Mackairston, by whom he had his eldest son, Robert Lauder, of Lauder, who flourished in 1575, whose line terminating by the death of his son and grandson, the direct line was carried on by Richard's 2nd son,

WILLIAM LAUDER, (erroneously called Robert, by Nisbet), who flourished about 1575 and 1600, and who m. Jean, dau. of Bellenden of Lasswade. By her he had three sons, Robert, who d. without issue; William, called "Will of the West Port," who, when doing justice in the Court House of Lauder as hereditary baillie, was broken in upon by the Earl of Hume and a party of the clans of Hume and Craunston, who fired the Tolbooth, and diked William Lauder on the bench; and as he died without issue, the succession was carried on by the younger brother,

ANDREW LAUDER, who, having gone to his mother's relations at Lasswade, had his residence at Melvin Mill about 1595. By his 1st wife, Janet, dau. of Ramsay, of Hillhead or Polton, a cadet of the Dalhousie family, he had his eldest son,

I. JOHN LAUDER, Esq. of Newington, Edrington, and Fountainhall, who was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia

in 1688, and who, as has been shown by the extinction of the elder branches, became the representative of the family. Sir John m. Isabel Elleis, of Morton Hall, and was s. by his eldest son,

II. SIR JOHN LAUDER, 2nd bart., who was nominated a senator of the College of Justice, by the title of Lord Fountainhall, in 1689. He m. Janet, dau. of Sir Andrew Ramsay, of Abbot's Hall, Bart., also a senator of the College of Justice by the title of Lord Abbotshall, by whom he had several children; and he was s. at his death, 1722, by his eldest son,

Lineage.

This very ancient and distinguished family of North Britain has been seated at Thirlestane, in Berwickshire, for nearly six centuries. Its earliest ancestor was Sir Richard de Mautland (as the name was formerly written), who gave divers lands to the abbey of Dryburgh, in the reign of ALEXANDER III.

SIR RICHARD MAITLAND, 12th feudal lord of Thirlestane, was a person of considerable importance in the era in which he lived. In 1552 and 1560, we find him one of the commissioners appointed to adjust the differences with England about the debatable lands on the borders. In 1554, he was constituted one of the extraordinary lords of Session; in 1561, appointed one of the ordinary lords, and in the following year, keeper of the privy seal, which latter office he resigned in 1567 in favour of his 2nd son. His lordship retired from the bench in 1584; on which occasion JAMES VI. acknowledged by letter Sir Richard's faithful services "to his grandsire, goodsire, goëddame, mother, and himself;" by which it would seem that this eminent person was employed seventy years at least in the public service. In the literary world he was known by his history of the family of Seton, and poems on several subjects. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir Thomas Cranston, and had (with a second son, JOHN, of whom presently, and other issue) an eldest son,

WILLIAM, of Leighington, a man of great integrity and loyalty, and the devoted friend and adherent of Queen MARY STUART. In 1558, William Maitland was constituted principal secretary of state to MARY; and in 1561 he was nominated one of her privy council. He many times afterwards came as Her Majesty's ambassador to the court of England, where he had the management of affairs of the utmost importance; and though his negotiations were sometimes not attended with the desired success, yet he always acquitted himself with fidelity and wise conduct. In 1561 his embassy to England was to desire Queen ELIZABETH's friendship, and to assure Her Majesty of Queen MARY's sincere intention of cultivating a good understanding with her dearest sister of England. In 1562, MARY sent him to solicit an interview for her with Queen ELIZABETH, and though he used all the arguments that could be devised by an able statesman, he could not bring it about. Again did he come in 1563, to endeavour to have Queen MARY declared heir to the crown of England; and certainly none had a better title: but ELIZABETH never would yield that point. In 1564 he came to treat about a match for his sovereign, MARY, and was most graciously received by Queen ELIZABETH: but that negotiation took no effect. In 1565 he arrived to desire Queen ELIZABETH's concurrence and approbation of Queen MARY's marriage with Henry, Lord Darnly; but the jealous Queen of England would not hear of marriage, and so opposed this as she had done

most of MARY's other overtures. The civil war broke out in Scotland in 1567, and Maitland's reputation for wisdom and integrity made him greatly courted by both parties; but his heart and his honour were in the safety of the Queen; with him her interest was identified with the interest and weal of Scotland. He strenuously opposed every measure taken against Her Majesty, both at home and at the court of England. He, it is said, was the person who projected the alliance of his imprisoned and unfortunate mistress with the Duke of Norfolk,—a scheme that cost Norfolk his head. Maitland assisted Sir William Kirkcaldy in holding out the castle of Edinburgh against the young King JAMES and the REGENT; this act proved his ruin. He was, in 1571, on account of it, deprived of the secretaryship, proclaimed a traitor, and attainted in the parliament held in the Canongate; and being in the castle of Edinburgh when it surrendered, in 1573, he terminated his life, according to the old Roman fashion (says Melvil), by a voluntary death, 9 June, 1573, to avoid the ignominy of a public execution. Secretary Maitland left issue only by his 2nd wife, Mary, dau. of Malcolm, Lord Fleming, viz., a dau., m. to Robert, 1st Earl of Roxburgh, and an only son,

JAMES, who, being a Catholic, withdrew to the Continent; he m. Agnes Maxwell, et d. s. p.: he sold his estate of Leighton to his uncle,

SIR JOHN MAITLAND, Knt. (2nd son of Sir Richard), who, having filled the high offices of lord-privy-seal, judge of the court of Session, secretary of state, and lord-chancellor of Scotland, was elevated to the peerage 18 May, 1590, by the title of Lord Maitland, of Thirstane. His lordship m. Jane, only dau. and heir of James, 4th Lord Fleming, and grand-dau., maternally, of James Hamilton, Duke of Chatelherault; and dying in 1595, was s. by his only son,

JOHN, 2nd baron, who was created, 2 April, 1616, Viscount Lauderdale; and 24 March, 1624, Lord Thirstane and Bolton, Viscount Maitland, and EARL OF LAUDERDALE, with remainder to his heirs male bearing the surname and arms of Maitland. His lordship was president of the council, and one of the ordinary lords of session. He m. Isabel, dau. of Alexander, Earl of Dunfermline, by whom he had issue, two sons and a dau. The earl d. in Jan. 1645, while president of the parliament, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN, 2nd earl, a man of great abilities and singular accomplishments, and one of the historic personages of his age. According to Lord Clarendon, he was deeply engaged with the Covenanters in the beginning of the civil war, and, when a young man, was one of the commissioners appointed by the Church of Scotland to meet with the assembly of divines at Westminster, in 1643, in order to new model the government of the Church. In 1644, he was one of the commissioners from the estate of Scotland to treat with the king at Uxbridge; but that treaty taking no effect, he was again commissioned by the Scottish parliament to treat with his majesty at Hampton Court, in 1647, the result of which was the raising an army to rescue the king. When the Scots were ready to march into England the earl was sent over to Holland to endeavour to prevail with the Prince of Wales to repair to the Scotch army; but it could not possibly be accomplished at that time, and before the earl reached the Scottish shore, the murder of CHARLES I. had been perpetrated. Lauderdale went again to Holland, to offer himself heart and deed to his new liege lord, CHARLES II.: he was most graciously received, and well and truly did he ever afterwards serve the king. In 1650, CHARLES came to Scotland, and the earl accompanied him, but Duke Hamilton and Lauderdale were obliged to conceal themselves amongst their friends for some time after his majesty landed, they being both disagreeable to the Earl of Argyll and the Covenanters, who then ruled with power supreme. After the meeting of the parliament at Stirling in 1651, all parties were (in appearance) heartily united in the service of his majesty. Duke Hamilton and Lauderdale seemed to have most of the king's confidence. Lauderdale continued a close companion of his majesty till the fatal battle of Worcester, where he was taken prisoner, and sent to the Tower of London. He underwent a severe confinement of nine years. The Restoration in 1660 released him. The king felt for the sufferings of Lauderdale, and had the highest sense of his great learning, and of his wisdom and knowledge in affairs of state; he loved him both for his fidelity and his ability, and Lauderdale became first favourite, and prime minister. He was made secretary of state, president of the council, heritable high sheriff of the co. Edinburgh, one of the extraordinary lords of session, first commissioner of the treasury, one of the lords of his majesty's bedchamber, lord high commissioner to the parliament, and governor of Edinburgh Castle. About the same time he took his seat in that famous cabinet council known as the Cabal administration, his initial L. giving the final letter to the word Cabal, formed from the initials of the five who composed the council. In May, 1672, he was created MARQUESS OF MARCIU, and DUKE OF LAUDERDALE, by patent, to him and the heirs male of his body; and on the 3 June following, he was installed at Windsor, a knight of the garter. On the 25 June, 1674, he was created a peer of England, by the titles of Baron Peter-sham and Earl of Gulford, both in the co. Surrey, by patent, also to the heirs male of his body; and he was made one of the privy council for Scotland, England, and Ireland. The Duke of Lauderdale's public character has been the subject of much severe comment on the part of some historians, whilst others have been quite as warm in his praise. North, an English historian, noted for his freedom from prejudice, speaks thus of Lauderdale in his Examination of the Reign of Charles II. "It is well known, that by the prudent conduct of the Duke of Lauderdale, Scotland was in a posture not only of safety, but of giving assistance to the king if needed. He was an inextinguishable loyalist, and kept the door of Scotland close shut, that no harm could get in or out there while he was commissioner, which, in the sense of the Earl of Shaftesbury and his party, was the worst of offences. In the meantime, all the party foul mouths vented against him the utmost obloquy that could possibly be imagined, as if he had been the basest of men, and the modern time-serving historians chime in with it, though most injurious to the character and honour of the best and wisest of statesmen that ever England had." The Duke of Lauderdale m. 1st, Anne, 2nd dau. of Alexander, 1st Earl of Home, co-heir, with her sister, Margaret, Countess of Moray, of her brother, James, 2nd Earl of Home, by whom he had an only child, ANNE, m. in 1666, to John, 2nd Marquess of Tweeddale. The duke m. 2ndly, 17 Feb. 1671-2, Eliza, Countess of Dysart, relict of Sir Lionel Talmash, Bart., but had no other issue. He d. 1682, when all the honors granted to himself expired, while his family honors devolved upon his brother,

CHARLES, 3rd Earl of Lauderdale. His lordship m. in 1652, Elizabeth, dau. and sole heir of Richard Lauder, Esq. of Hatton, co. Edinburgh, by whom he had issue, RICHARD, JOHN, and CHARLES, besides three other sons and two daus. The earl, who was general of the Mint, deputy-treasurer, and one of the judges of the court of Session in Scotland, and a baronet of Nova Scotia (created 12 May, 1672), d. in 1691, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD, 4th earl. This nobleman, who was a privy-councillor, general of the Mint, and lord-justice-general from 1681 to 1684, was outlawed in 1694, for his adhesion to the fortunes of JAMES II.; and dying in Paris, without issue, in 1695, (he m. Anne, 2nd dau. of Archibald, 9th Earl of Argyll), the peerage devolved upon his brother,

He was appointed, in 1846, resident at Lahore and governor-general's agent on the north-west frontier. He became a general, and was, for his eminent services, made a civil K.C.B. in 1848. Here he was when the hideous mutiny broke out, and here, within the fortified residency of Lucknow, he was intrenched with all the Europeans and the others who remained faithful, and he thus began that renowned defence, which for skill, endurance, and heroic bravery, has little to rival it in the annals of war. He did not, however, live to share in the glorious result. He was, on the 2nd July, 1857, mortally wounded by a shell, and d. in the residency two days afterwards. WILLIAM the Conqueror, and one of his barons), was summoned to parliament 14 Dec. 1264, when he was constituted by patent, justiciary of England. This personage, one of the most powerful barons of his time, fell at the battle of Evesham, 5 Aug. 1265, and was s. by his son (by Olivia, dau. and heir of Philip, Lord Basset, of Wycombe, co. Bucks).

HUGH, known in history as Hugh de Spencer, senior, 2nd baron, who was summoned to parliament, 23 June, 1295, and appointed governor of Marlborough Castle, 2nd EDWARD II. He was further promoted to the dignity of Earl of Winchester, 10 May, 1322. This nobleman was banished the realm, through the influence of the barons, in 1320; but returning the ensuing year, and adhering stanchly to the cause of his oppressed sovereign, was beheaded after the landing of Queen ISABEL and the Prince of Wales, in Oct. 1326, without the formality of a trial. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of William de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and widow of Sir Patrick Chaworth, by whom he had, with five daus., an only son,

SIR HUGH DE SPENCER (KNOWN AS Hugh de Spencer, junior), who having m. Eleanor, dau. and co-heir of Gilbert, Earl of Gloucester, and niece of EDWARD II. was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 1314 to 1325, and was commonly called EARL OF GLOUCESTER. In the 13th EDWARD II. he was nominated lord-chamberlain. His lordship was soon after, however, obliged with his father to leave the kingdom; but being recalled with him, was constituted governor of the castle and demesne lands of Gloucester, and warden of the forest of Dean. He was eventually, however, beheaded at Hereford, in Nov. 1326; and having been declared a traitor by parliament, his honours became forfeited. This eminent nobleman left issue,

- i. HUGH.
- ii. Edward, m. Anne, dau. of Henry, Lord Ferrers of Groby; and dying in 1342, left,

The eldest son,

HUGH, commonly called Lord Glamorgan, having entered into the military service of EDWARD III. and distinguished himself in France and Scotland, was summoned to parliament from 1338 to 1349, when he d. without issue; and his nephew and heir,

SIR EDWARD DE SPENCER, being summoned from 1357 to 1372, was installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Bartholomew Burghersh Knt.; and dying in 1375, was s. by his son,

THOMAS, commonly called De Spencer of Glamorgan, who was summoned in 1396, and created Earl of Gloucester in 1397; but being beheaded and declared a traitor in 1406, for conspiring to restore RICHARD II. his honours were extinguished. This nobleman left a son and heir, who died during minority, when his lordship's sister, ISABEL DE SPENCER, became his heir, and m. Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Worcester and Baron Abergavenny, by whom she had an only dau.

ELIZABETH BEAUCHAMP, who m. Edward Neville 4th son of Ralph, Earl of Westmorland (an earldom forfeited in 1570); and the attainer of her grandfather, Thomas, 7th Baron de Spencer, having been reversed, her ladyship carried the Baronies of Boregavenny, Birghersh, and De Spencer, into the family of her husband, where they remained until 1589, when

THE HON. MARY NEVILLE, m. in 1574, Sir Thomas Fane, Knt. by whom she had issue, four sons and two daus. Lady Fane, after the demise of Sir Thomas, 25 May, 1604, was restored, by letters patent, to the dignity of Baroness le de Spencer, in remainder to the heirs of her body, with the ancient seat, place, and precedence of her ancestors (her ladyship was likewise entitled to the Barony of Burghersh, but that has never been claimed); the Barony of Abergavenny was confirmed at the same time to the heir male. Lady le de Spencer d. 23 June, 1626, and was s. by her eldest son,

FRANCIS, who was created Baron Burghersh and EARL OF WESTMORLAND 29 Dec. 1624, and the Barony of De Spencer merged in the earldom, until the demise of

JOHN, the 7th earl, in 1762 (who succeeded his two brothers), without issue, when it fell into abeyance between the heirs of his lordship's sisters, Mury, wife of Sir Francis Dashwood, Bart. and Catherine, lady of William Paul, Esq.; but the crown terminated the abeyance in 1763, in favour of

Lineage.

The family of OSBORNE is one of considerable antiquity in Kent, and was early seated at Ashford, in that county. So far back as the 12th of HENRY VI. John Osborne, of Canterbury, occurs on the list of Kentish gentry. Ancient, however, as is the paternal ancestry of the noble family of Osborne, the illustrious houses of Conyers, D'Arcy, and Godolphin, which the present Duke of Leeds represents, and his descent through various lines from the royal house of Plantagenet, (see BURKE'S Royal Families.) add a lustre to his grace's coronet of which few other families can boast.

GEOFFREY COKE, of Diddington, from whom descended

SIR EDWARD COKE, the celebrated lawyer. This eminent person the son of Robert Coke, Esq. of Mileham, in the co. of Norfolk, and Winifred, his wife, dau., and one of the heirs of William Knightley, of Morgrave-Knightley, in the same shire, was born at the seat of his father, in 1549, and was, at ten years of age, sent to the grammar-school at Norwich, whence he removed to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he studied for four years, and where, in after time, he was chosen high-steward of that university. From Cambridge he removed to Clifford's-Inn, and, the year after, 1572, he was entered a student in the Inner-Temple, whence he was called to the bar, in 1578, and being chosen reader in Lyon's-Inn, acquired so much celebrity, that he very soon attained considerable practice. About this period he m. 1st, Bridget, dau. and co-heir of John Paston, Esq. of Huntingfield Hall, in the co. of Suffolk, 3rd son of Sir William Paston, of Paston, her ancestor, Judge Paston, had sat on the bench of the Common Pleas with Judge Littleton, whose renowned commentator Coke was to become. With this lady, Coke acquired a fortune of 30,000*l.* His 2nd wife was the Lady Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Cecil, first Earl of Exeter and widow of Sir William Hatton, Knt. Coke's first alliance brought him honours and preferments as well as wealth. The cities of Coventry and Norwich soon after elected him their recorder. The county of Norfolk returned him to parliament, and the House of Commons placed him in the speaker's chair. In the 35th of ELIZABETH (16 June, 1592), Mr. Coke was appointed Solicitor, and, 10 April, the next year Attorney-General, and in that capacity, acted as state prosecutor with an asperity and a roughness of manner that did little credit to himself or his office. In 1603, he received the honour of knighthood from King JAMES I. at Greenwich, and in three years afterwards was elevated. 30 June, 1606, to the bench, as chief-justice of the Court of Common Pleas, from which he was advanced, 25 Oct. 1613, to be chief-justice of the Court of King's Bench. His lordship incurred subsequently, however, the displeasure of his sovereign; but made up the breach by marrying his youngest dau. to the brother of the royal favorite, Villiers. A story is told that, while in disgrace, Coke, hearing that a noble lord had solicited from the crown a portion of the lands belonging to the church at Norwich, which he had recovered, and settled thereon, he cautioned the peer to desist, or that he would resume his gown and cap, and come into Westminster Hall once again, to plead the cause of the church. Sir Edward's place of Chief-Justice was given to John Ley, 29 Jan. 1620. Sir Edward, afterwards, supporting energetically the privileges of the Commons, was committed to the tower in 1621, and dismissed the privy council. On the accession of CHARLES I., he was made sheriff of Bucks, to prevent his representing that co. in parliament; but he was elected its M.P. in 1628, and he then was distinguished for his strong and eloquent adhesion to the side of the Commons. His last public act was his proposing and framing the famous Petition of Right. Between his paternal property, the great marriage portion he had with his wife, and his valuable offices and lucrative practice at the bar, Sir Edward Coke realised an estate so ample, that each of his sons possessed a fortune equal to that of an elder brother. Camden in his Britannia, says, "that he was a person of admirable parts, than whom, as none ever applied himself closer to the study of the law, so never did any one understand it better. Of which, he fully convinced England, by his excellent administration for many years together, whilst attorney-general, and by executing the office of lord chief-justice of the Common Pleas with the greatest wisdom and prudence; nor did he give less proof of his abilities in his excellent reports, and commentaries upon our laws (especially his Commentary on the Tenures of Littleton), whereby he has highly obliged both his own age and posterity." Sir Edward Coke d. at his house at Stoke-Pegis, Bucks, 3 Sept. 1633, at the advanced age of eighty-three, and a lofty pillar near commemorates his residence there. A noble monument, with inscriptions, was also erected to his memory at his burial place, Tittleshall church, Norfolk, with his effigies habited in judge's robes, lying at full length, under a canopy supported by two marble pillars. Sir Edward Coke's daus. by his last wife, were,

Lineage.

The ancestors of this noble family assume their surname from the township of High Leigh, co. Chester, where they were seated before the Conquest.

HAMON DE LEIGH, lord of the moiety of High Leigh, temp. HENRY II., was great-grandfather of

RICHARD DE LEIGH, of High Leigh, whose dau.,

AGNES LEIGH, m. 1st, Richard de Lymn, and had a son, THOMAS, who assumed the surname of LEIGH, and was ancestor of the LEIGHS of West Hall, High Leigh. She m. 2ndly, William de Hawardyn; and 3rdly, William Venables, by whom she had a son, who took his mother's name of Leigh, and was,

JOHN LEIGH, of Booths, co. Chester, who, by his 1st wife, Ellen, dau. of Richard Dent, of Cheshire, had a son, JOHN, ancestor of the LEIGHS of Booths, now represented by PETER LEIGH, Esq. He m. 2ndly, Ellen, dau. of Thomas Corona, of Adlington, and had a son,

ROBERT LEIGH, of Adlington, who m. 1st, Sibil, dau. of — Hanford, of Hanford, in Cheshire; and 2ndly, Maud, dau. and heir of Adam de Norley, of Norley. By his first wife he had a son, ROBERT, ancestor of the LEIGHS of Adlington; and by his second wife, another son,

SIR PIERS LEIGH, who had Lyme granted to him, and who in his early youth served in the wars of France, and bore the standard of Edward the Black Prince at the battle of Crecy, and there took prisoner the Count de Tankerville. Sir Piers was a devoted adherent of the Black Prince's son, RICHARD II., and lost his life in the cause of that monarch. He was beheaded at Chester, in 1399, by command of the Duke of Lancaster, afterwards HENRY IV., who ordered his head to be set on one of the highest turrets of that fortified city. Sir Piers m. 1388, Margaret, widow of Sir John Savage, of Clifton, Kent, and dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Dammery, of Bradley, one of the most distinguished warriors at the battle of Crecy, and had two sons, viz., I. PETER (Sir), created a Knight-Banneret by HENRY V., and slain at the battle of Agincourt, 24 Oct. 1415; ancestor of the LEIGHS of Lyme; and II. JOHN, of Ridge. The 2nd son,

JOHN LEIGH, Esq. of Ridge, which estate he acquired by his wife Alice, dau. and heir of John Alcock, had two sons, I. ROGER, ancestor of the LEIGHS of Ridge; and II. RICHARD. The younger son,

RICHARD LEIGH, was seated at Rushall. His son,

ROGER LEIGH, of Rushall, had issue, WILLIAM, ancestor of the LEIGHS of Rushall; and a younger son,

SIR THOMAS LEIGH, Knt., a merchant of London, and lord-mayor in 1558, m. Alice, dau. and heir of John Barker, otherwise Coverall, of Wolverton, and niece of the opulent citizen, Alderman Sir Rowland Hill, of whose wealth she inherited the greater part. Thomas Leigh served the office of sheriff of London, and was lord mayor at the death of Queen MARY TUDOR. He was knighted during his mayoralty, and dying 17 Nov. 1571, was buried in Mercer's Chapel, London, with this epitaph on his tomb:—

Sir Thomas Leigh bi civil life
All offices did beare,
Which in this city worshipfull,
Or honourable were.
Whom as God blessed with great wealth,
So losses did he feele;
Yet never changed he constant minde,
'Tho' fortune turn'd her wheele.
Learning he lov'd and helpt the poore;
To them that knew him deere;
For whom this lady and loving wife
This tomb hath builded here.

Sir Thomas's widow lived at Stoneleigh to a very advanced age, having seen her children's children to the fourth generation. She d. in 1603, and was buried at Stoneleigh, where she had founded an hospital for five poor men and five poor women, all of them to be unmarried persons, and to be nominated after her decease by Sir Thomas Leigh, her son, and his heirs for ever. Sir Thomas Leigh, the elder, left issue by this lady,

- I. ROWLAND, his heir.
- II. THOMAS (Sir, Knt.), of Stoneleigh, created a Baronet in 1611, whose grandson and successor, SIR THOMAS LEIGH, the 2nd baronet, a staunch cavalier, and M.P. for the co. of Warwick, temp. CHARLES I., was, for his zeal in the royal cause, elevated to the peerage, by letters patent dated at Oxford, 1 July, 1643, as BARON LEIGH, of Stoneleigh, in the co. of Warwick. He had pleased the king particularly in one matter, which was this. CHARLES, on his way to set up his standard at Nottingham, marched to Coventry; but finding the gates shut against him, and that no summons could prevail with the mayor and magistrates to open them, he went the same night to Sir Thomas Leigh's house at Stoneleigh, and there his majesty met with a warm and loyal welcome, and right plentiful and hospitable entertainment from his devoted subject, Sir Thomas. Sir Thomas becoming Lord Leigh, persevered in his ardent attachment to royalty, and at one time paid no less than £4,895 as a compensation for his estate. He had the gratification, however, of seeing the monarchy restored. His lordship m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Egerton, eldest son of Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, and dying 22 Feb. 1671, was s. by his grandson, THOMAS LEIGH, 2nd baron, whose great-grandson and last male heir,

SIR RICHARD DE LEIGHTON, Knt., had a reconveyance from William Fitz Allan, soon after the Conquest, of the manor of Leighton; and from him descended

JOHN LEIGHTON, Esq. of Stretton, who was thrice high-sheriff of Shropshire in the reign of EDWARD IV., and obtained the manors of Watlesborough and Cardleston (still in the possession of the family), by marriage with Anchoret, dau. and co-heir (by Jane, dau. and heir of Sir William Clopton, Knt. of Clopton), of Sir John de Burgh, Lord of Mawddwy, in Merioneth, son of Sir Hugh de Burgh (derived from the celebrated justiciary, Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, temp. King JOHN), by Elizabeth, sister and heir of Foulk, Lord of Mawddwy, grandson of William, living 17th EDWARD I., 4th son of Griffith ap Gwenwynwyn, Prince of Powys-Wenwynwyn (see HERONS of Gwent; BURKE'S Landed Gentry). By this lady (derived from the regal line of Powys) he had a son, his successor,

Lineage.

The FitzGerald's are descended from "Dominus OTHO," who is supposed to have been of the family of Gherardini of Florence; and this notion is confirmed by the Latin form of name, Geraldini, assumed by his descendants. This noble passed over into Normandy, and thence, in 1057, into England, where he became so great a favourite with Edward the Confessor, that he excited the jealousy of the Saxon Thanes. However derived, his English possessions were enormous, which, at his death, devolved on his son WALTER, who, it is somewhat remarkable, was treated after the Conquest as a fellow-countryman of the Normans. This fortunate heir put the cope-stone to his prosperity by a marriage with Gladys, the daughter of Rhiwallon ap Cynfyn, Prince of North Wales; and his son, GERALD FITZWALTER, m. Nesta, the daughter of Rhys ap Gruffydd, Prince of South Wales, by whom he had three sons, viz.,

- I. MAURICE, his heir.
- II. William, ancestor of the families of Carew, Grace, Fitzmaurice, and Gerard.
- III. David, bishop of St. David's, d. 1176.

The eldest son.

MAURICE FITZGERALD, was the patriarch of the Irish

Geraldines. In 1168, Dermot Mac Murrough, King of Leinster, driven from his territory by Roderick O'Connor, King of Ireland, sought assistance from the English, and succeeded in enlisting in his cause the renowned Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke. Having reached St. David's, on his way back to Ireland, Dermot was hospitably received by David FitzGerald, bishop of the diocese; and at the prelate's persuasion, his younger brother, Maurice, and his half-brother, Robert Fitzstephen, engaged to assist Mac Murrough with their forces. Soon after, Maurice embarked for Ireland, with two ships containing a small body of soldiers, and after having been invested with the lordship of Wexford, marched forward and took Dublin. But the Irish king was no idle or unconcerned spectator of this achievement. In 1171, he had gathered such an increase of strength that though Maurice was by this time joined by Strongbow, Roderick was able to invest Dublin with 30,000 men, while at sea he blockaded it with a fleet of thirty Manx vessels. The case of the English, with only 600 troops, seemed well nigh desperate. In this emergency, by Maurice's advice and earnest and inspiring exhortations, the beleaguered garrison determined to trust to their superior warlike prowess and daring, and regardless of the disparity of numbers, to encounter the foe. The bold exploit was crowned with success; the Irish were completely defeated, and the king, Roderick, with difficulty escaped. Maurice died at Wexford in 1177, and was buried in the Abbey, outside the walls of that town. "His death," says the old chronicler, "was not without much sorrow of all his friends, and much harm and loss to the English interest in Ireland. He was a man witty and manful; a truer man, not steadfast, for constancy, fidelity, and love, left he none in Ireland." "In truth," continues Giraldus Cambrensis, "Maurice was an honourable and modest man; with a face sun-burnt and well-looking, of middle height; a man well modelled in mind and body; a man of innate goodness; desiring rather to be than to seem good; a man of few words, but full of weight, having more of the heart than of the mouth, more of reason than of volubility, more wisdom than eloquence; and yet when it was required, earnest to the purpose. In military affairs valiant; and second to few in activity, neither impetuous nor rash, but circumspect in attack and deliberate in defence; a sober, modest, and chaste man; constant, trusty, and faithful; a man not altogether without fault, yet not spotted with any notorious or greater crime." By his wife, Alice de Montgomery, he left a son and heir,

GERALD FITZMAURICE, who received summons to Parliament, as BARON OFFALY, in 1205, and died the same year; his son and heir, by Katharine his wife, daughter of Hamo de Valois, lord chief justice of Ireland in 1197, was

MAURICE FITZGERALD, the second baron, who bore the name of his grandfather, the gallant companion of Strongbow, was not unworthy of it. Piety, it is evident, formed a strong ingredient in his character: for, in 1216, he introduced into Ireland the order of the Franciscans; in 1229, that of the Dominicans; and, in two years after, he built the Franciscan Abbey of Youghal. As a statesman, the second Lord Offaly exhibited considerable ability in the office of lord justice of Ireland, and as a soldier he seems to have fallen little short of his gallant predecessor, Maurice Fitzgerald. He d. eventually in 1257, in the monastery of Youghal. He m. Juliana, dau. of John de Cogan, lord justice 1247, and had three sons, MAURICE, his heir; Gerald, father of MAURICE, 5th baron; and Thomas, father of JOHN, 1st EARL OF KILDARE. The eldest son,

MAURICE FITZMAURICE, 3rd Baron Offaly. This nobleman, who was afterwards chief governor of Ireland, m. Emelina de Longepes, heiress of the territory of O'Murthy, which included Killea and Castledermot, and was s. at his decease, in 1277, by his son,

GERALD, 4th Lord Offaly, who was s. by his cousin,

MAURICE, 5th Baron, who d. s. p. and was s. by his cousin, JOHN FITZTHOMAS FITZGERALD, Lord Offaly. This nobleman, when an infant, was in the Castle of Woodstock, when there was an alarm of fire; in the confusion that ensued the child was forgotten, and on the servants returning to search for him, the room in which he lay was found in ruins. Soon after a strange voice was heard in one of the towers, and upon looking up, they saw an ape, which was usually kept chained, carefully holding the child in his arms. The Earl afterwards, in gratitude for his preservation, adopted a monkey for his crest; and some of his descendants in memory of it, took the additional motto "non immemor beneficii." The life of JOHN FITZ-THOMAS FITZGERALD, 1st earl of Kildare, the child

thus miraculously preserved, abounds in adventures that would form a fitting subject for romance. He was at variance with William de Vesci, Lord of Kildare, a baron much esteemed by the reigning monarch, EDWARD I.; their disputes arising from the contiguity of their estates. De Vesci, who was Lord Justice of Ireland, openly declared that John FitzThomas was the cause of the existing disturbances, and that he was "in private quarrels as fierce as a lion, but in publick injuries as meeke as a lambe." This having been reported to Fitzgerald, he, in the presence of the lords of the council replied:—"You would gladly charge me with treason, that, by shedding my blood, and by catching my land into your clouches, that but so neere upon your lands of Kylhare, you might make your sennce a proper gentleman." "A gentleman!" quoth the Lord Justice. "Thou bold baron, I tell thee the Vesceis were gentlemen before the Geraldines were barons of Offaly; yea, and before that Welsh bankrupt, thynce ancestor, fettered his nest in Leinster;" and then accused him of being "a supporter of thieves, and upholder of traytours." "As for my ancestor," replied the baron, "whom you terme a bankrupt, how riche or how poore he was upon his repyrtre to Ireland, I purpose not at this time to debate; yet this much I may boldly say, that he came hither as a byer, not a beggar. He bought his enemies' land by spending his blood: but you lurking like a spider in his cobweb to entrappe flies, endeavour to beg subjects' livings wrongfully, by despoying them of their lives. I, John Fitz-Thomas, Baron of Offaly, doe tell thee, William Vescei, that I am noe traytoure, noe felon; but that thou art the only battress by which the king's enemies are supported." Both parties being summoned to the royal presence, Fitzgerald maintained the same bold language, accusing the justiciary of corruption, and saying that, while the nobility were excluded from his presence, "an Irish cow could at all times have access to him. But," continued Offaly, "so much as our mutual complaints stand upon, the one his yea, and the other his nay, and that you would be taken for a champion, and I am known to be no coward, let us, in God's name, leave lying for varlets, bearding for ruffians, facing for crackers, chatting for twattlers, scolding for callets, booking for scriveners, pleading for lawyers; and let us try, with the dint of swords, as becomes martial men to do, our mutual quarrels. Therefore, to justify that I am a true subject, and that thou, Vescei, art an arch traitor to God and to my king, here, in the presence of his highness, and in the hearing of this honourable assembly, I challenge the combat." De Vescei accepted the challenge, amidst the applauses of the assembly; but either he doubted the goodness of his cause, or feared to contend with so formidable an adversary. Before the appointed day he fled to France, whereupon the king declared Offaly innocent; adding, "albeit De Vescei conveyed his person into France, yet he left his lands behind him in Ireland," and he granted them to the Baron of Offaly, who subsequently, in many a hard-fought day, showed himself no less true than valiant. For his good services the English monarch (EDWARD II.) created him EARL OF KILDARE, and assigned to him the town and castle of that name. Again we pass over many illustrious chiefs of this house, to come to

THOMAS, the 7th earl. This nobleman was appointed, in 1454 and 1455, lord-deputy of Ireland; and was continued in the government of Ireland until 1459. In 1468, he was appointed lord-chancellor of Ireland, but being involved with the Earl of Desmond, he was attainted with that nobleman, (who suffered death,) but subsequently pardoned, set at liberty, and restored in blood, by act of parliament. His lordship was afterwards lord-justice; and, in 1471, deputy to George, Duke of Clarence. He* d. 25 Murch, 1477, and was s. by his eldest son (by Johan, dau. of James, 7th Earl of Desmond),

GERALD, 8th earl, called the great, who was constituted, upon his accession to the peerage, lord-deputy to Richard, Duke of York, and held a parliament at Naas, on Friday, after the feast of St. Petronelle the Virgin. In 1480, he was re-appointed lord-deputy; and again, upon the accession of HENRY VII., deputy to Jasper, Duke of Bedford, the lord-lieutenant. Upon the arrival, however, of Lambert Simnel, and his tutor, Richard Simon, an Oxford priest, in Ireland, the lord-deputy, the chancellor (Thomas Fitzgerald, the deputy's brother), treasurer, and other nobles in the York interest, immediately acknowledged the impostor, and had him proclaimed in Dublin, by the style of EDWARD VI.; and the lord-deputy assisted with the others at his coronation in Christ's Church, 2 May, 1487, where the ceremony was performed with great solemnity, the chancellor, the arch-bishop of Dublin, the Earl of Lincoln, Lord Lovel, Jenico Marks, mayor of Dublin, and several other persons of rank, attending. The crown was borrowed from the image of the Virgin Mary; John Pain, bishop of Meath, preached the coronation sermon; and the pretender was subsequently conveyed upon the shoulders of Darcy of Platen, a person of extraordinary height, to the castle of Dublin, amidst the shouts of the populace. In the engagement which afterwards decided the fate of Simnel, near Stoke, the chancellor, Fitzgerald, fell; but the lord-deputy had the good fortune to make his peace with the king. And well, both by his fidelity and his talents as a statesman and a soldier, did the great earl repay the king's confidence. Perkin Warbeck, on his landing at Cork in 1497, was successfully opposed by the Earls of Kildare and Desmond, and narrowly escaped being taken prisoner. For this good service, King Henry conferred on Kildare several manors in the counties of Warwick and Gloucester. With a strong hand, too, the Earl controlled the unruly native chieftains, and, if he could not entirely extinguish the spirit of revolt, yet he so well managed his affairs, that rebellion never dared to show its head, but it was instantly put down, and forced to save itself by submission. So pleasing were his efforts to Henry, that he was received by him with the highest favour upon his again visiting England to give an account of his government, and returned magno cum honore et novis instructionibus, taking with him his son Gerald, who shortly afterwards, was made high treasurer of Ireland. That unquiet spirit, to which we have just alluded, again broke out and showed itself in a formidable array against the king's authority, amongst many of the most powerful native chiefs under the Lord of Clanricarde, who had married Kildare's daughter, but had so neglected her as to excite much ill blood between the lady's husband and her father. Never had Gerald's pre-eminent skill and courage been more severely tasked. When he came in sight of the rebels they were drawn up in full force upon Knock Tuagh, or the hill of axes, now called Knockdoe, about seven miles from Galway. Many of the lords of the pale began to be alarmed for the result, on seeing the overwhelming strength of the enemy, who had collected the largest army ever seen in the country since the invasion of 1169. They would have persuaded the earl to offer terms of peace, but the stout old soldier refused to listen for a moment to such timid counsels. Having drawn up his men in battle array, he bluntly told them that their own safety, as well as the king's honour, rested on their unflinching valour in that day's service. The onset was made by the rebels, and in a gallant style, but they were received with such a volley of arrows from the Leinster men that they fell back in confusion. The earl then commanded his vanguard to advance, when his son Gerald, in the impatience of youthful courage, charged without orders at the head of his men in such a brave and resolute manner as no one could do better. "Far away from the troops," says the Irish chronicler, "were heard the violent onset of the martial chiefs, the vehement efforts of the champions, the charge of the royal heroes, the noise of the swords, the clamour of the troops when endangered, the shouts and exultations of the youths, the sound made by the falling of brave men, and the triumph of nobles over plebeians." It was a fierce battle, such as had not been known in latter times. Of Clanricarde's nine divisions which were in solid array, there survived only one broken battalion. The rebels were completely routed, their slain being computed at nearly nine thousand men, and, though this may be exaggeration, there can be no doubt that the battle of Knock Tuagh, broke the strength of the western and southern sept. For this good service Kildare was created by HENRY a knight of the garter in 1504. The days of this great man were now drawing fast to a conclusion. In 1513, he marched against Lemyvannon, or O'Carroll's Castle, now called "Leap Castle," in the King's County; but as he was watering his horse in the river Greese, at Killea, he was shot by one of the O'Mores, of Leix, and after lingering for a few days, he died of his wound, and was buried in his own chapel, at Christ Church, before the high altar. Holinshed describes him as a "mightie man of stature, full of honour and courage, who had bin lord deputy and lord justice of Ireland three and thirtie yeares. Kildare was in government milde, to his enemies sterne. He was open and playne, hardly able to rule himself when he was moved; in anger not so sharp as short, being easily displeasid and sooner appeasid." The great earl, m. 1st, Allison, dau. and co-heir of Rowland Eustace, Baron of Portlester, and had by her six daus, and one son, GERALD; he m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Oliver St. John, of Lydiard Tregoze, and had by her seven sons.

GEROIT OGE, i.e. GERALD, the younger, the 9th Earl of Kildare, entered upon his office of lord-deputy under less favourable auspices than his predecessor had done, for HENRY VIII. if not more suspicious than his father, was much inferior to him in his knowledge of men, and in the way of ruling them by the show of a magnanimous confidence. Still, it must be allowed, that Gerald, as governor of Ireland, seemed to consider himself as representing the king's interests only in the pale, which at that time, included the counties of Dublin, Louth, Meath, and Kildare; ruling the rest of his possessions as independently as any native chief, and these were tolerably extensive, for he and his kinsmen occupied the counties of Kildare and Carlow as far as the bridge of Leighlin, exacting coin and livery within those bounds. In fact, while he was English to the Irish, he was, to a certain degree, Irish to the English who were placed in this unfortunate dilemma; they must of necessity support the lord deputy from his influence over the pale, which was their instrument for curbing the rest of Ireland, then divided amongst about thirty great Anglo-Irish lords, and sixty Irish chieftains. On the other hand there was always a danger of the lord deputy's growing over-powerful, and turning round upon his masters. The only thing, as it seems, that prevented such a casualty, was the rooted hatred borne by the Irish chieftains towards the pale, which they justly considered as the great obstacle to their regaining that absolute independence which was the constant object of all their struggles when not engaged in feud amongst themselves. Thus it happened to Gerald Oge, as it had happened to his predecessors, to more than once incur the jealousy of the English government, and to be deprived of his office of lord deputy. What was yet worse, he unluckily drew down upon himself the hatred of the stern and lynx-eyed Wolsey, and nearly lost his head in consequence, but the stout earl weathered the storm which had well nigh foundered him, and even again attained to his former dignity; but it was only to relapse into suspicion and disgrace. He was once more called over to England and recommitted to the tower. Before his departure from Ireland, he constituted his son Thomas, Lord Offaly, vice-deputy; and strictly enjoined him to be "wise and prudent," and to submit in all things to "the sounde and sage advice of the council." Nevertheless, "the hot and active temper" of the young lord could not be restrained. The murder of Archbishop Alen, perpetrated by his followers, led to the severe sentence of excommunication pronounced against him; which being shown to the old Earl in the Tower, had such an effect on him, that he died shortly after, of a broken heart. His remains received sepulture within the tower walls, in St. Peter's Church,—a sorry recompense for all his services. The excess of jealous suspicion which made the English government so uncertain in their treatment of the Fitzgeralds—one day creating them lord deputies, and the next imprisoning them in the Tower, provoked the very evils they were so anxious to avoid. Some time before the 9th earl died, a report reached Ireland that he was to be beheaded. A strange story is told by Holinshed, how this report was further confirmed in secret letters, written by certain servants of Sir William Skeffington. "One of these letters fell into the hands of a priest, who threw it among other papers, meaning to read it at leisure. That night a gentleman, a retainer of Lord Thomas, lodged with the priest, and sought in the morning when he rose for some paper to darn on his strayed stockings; and, as the devil would, he hit upon the letter, and bore it away in the heele of his stocke." At night he found the paper, and seeing that it announced the earl's death, he carried it to his son, LORD THOMAS who immediately resolved to throw off his allegiance to the English crown. From this moment the adventures of THOMAS, 10th EARL OF KILDARE,* known (from the fringes on the helmets of his retainers) as

"Silken Thomas," would form no uninteresting chapter of a romance; and, after all, his determination was not so hopeless of success as many at the time imagined it to be, so extensive was the influence of the Geraldines. In disclaiming the English rule, the young earl proceeded with all the chivalric honour of a knight of old. He called a meeting of the council at St. Mary's Abbey, and when he had seated himself at the head of the table, a party of his followers rushed in, to the sore amazement of those who had not been previously warned of his intentions. The words in which he then addressed them were worthy of his great ancestors, and show of what metal the Geraldines were made. He then tendered his sword of state to the chancellor (Cromer). The gentle prelate, who was a well-wisher of the Geraldines, besought him, with tears in his eyes, to abandon his purpose; and might, perhaps, have succeeded, but that Nelan, an Irish bard, then present, burst out on the sudden into a heroic strain, in his native tongue, eulogistic of "Silken Thomas," and concluded by warning him, that he had "lingered there over long." The earl was roused by the fervour of this appeal. Addressing the chancellor somewhat abruptly, he renounced all allegiance to the English monarch, saying, that he chose rather "to die with valiantness and liberty." Never was there a finer scene for poet or painter than this at St. Mary's Abbey; and never has ancient history left us a happier theme for either of them than "Silken Thomas." His subsequent career fully corresponded with this commencement. For a length of time he resisted, successfully, the famous lord deputy, Skeffington, with all the support that England could afford him, or that he derived from such of the native Irish septs as had been previously hostile to the earl, or were bought over by the hope of present advantage. When, finally, deserted by the last of his allies, Kildare found himself obliged to surrender, it was upon a promise, sealed upon the holy sacrament, that he should receive a full pardon on his arrival in England. But this pledge was shamefully violated by HENRY VIII. For sixteen months the earl was incarcerated in the Tower of London, and then, together with his five uncles, two of whom had always been staunch adherents of the king, was hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn, on the 8 of February, 1537, being then but twenty-four years of age. The rebellion of "Silken Thomas" is one of the most interesting episodes of history, and perhaps the whole range of romance produces no more affecting a story. It is melancholy to contrast the early condition of the gay, glittering noble, "the Silken Lord," Vice Deputy of Ireland, and head of one of the most illustrious families in the world, with that bitter suffering which he described in a letter to an adherent, while a prisoner in the Tower:—"I never had eny money syns I cam unto prison but a nobull, nor I have had nethyr hosyn, dublet, nor shoyes, nor shyrtyt, but on . . . I have gone barefote dyverse tymes (when yt hath not been very warme) and so I should have don styll, and now, but that pore prysoners, of their gentylnes, hath sometyme gevyn me old hosyn and shoyes and old shyrttes. This I wryte unto you, not as complayning on my frydes, but for to shew you the trewth of my gret nede." The generous, self-sacrificing spirit of the youth still shines through all his sufferings; and the reader will scarcely fail to be struck with the marked resemblance between "Silken Thomas" and another equally ill-fated Geraldine, of a much later period—the amiable and high-minded Lord Edward Fitz-Gerald. Both were led away by the enthusiasm of their nature; both were chivalrously honourable; both displayed, throughout the contest, an unflinching spirit; and each, in the bloom of manhood, paid the penalty of his error in a violent death. Though attainder followed, the House of Kildare was not destined to perish. Thomas's half-brother, GERALD, the 11th Earl of Kildare, then a minor, only twelve years old, became the male representative of the Geraldines. So great was the sympathy in his favour, from one end of Ireland to the other, that the English Government became, beyond measure, anxious to get him into their power; but all their efforts were in vain to corrupt the fidelity of those to whose charge he had been entrusted. By them he was safely conveyed to the Continent, where he found a welcome reception; and, though the English monarch was successful in having him dismissed from one place of refuge after the other, yet he could not persuade any one of his friendly allies to give the boy up. At length, he obtained a safe retreat in Rome, with his kinsman, Cardinal Pole, who caused him to be educated, and subsequently sent him, at his own desire, upon his travels. He afterwards entered the service of

Returning to England, after the death of King HENRY, in company with some foreign ambassadors, he was present at a masque given by EDWARD VI., where he met, wooed, and won his future wife, Mabel, dau. of Sir Anthony Browne, K.G. Through Sir Anthony's influence, the young king gave Gerald back his Irish estates and conferred on him knighthood; and, at a later period, Queen MARY restored to him his hereditary honours. After a brilliant career, Earl Gerald d. in London, in 1655, but his body was taken back to Ireland, and buried in Kildare. On the landing of WILLIAM in Ireland, Capt. FitzGerald was placed in close durance within the college of Dublin, and so restrained until the defeat of JAMES at the Boyne, when he broke from his prison, and, by his courage and prudence, preserved Dublin from being sacked. Lineage.

This noble house is chief of the very ancient Scottish family of MELVILLE, which derived, it is stated, from a person of Anglo-Norman lineage, called MALB, who settled, under DAVID I., upon some lands in the co. Edinburgh, which he called MAL-VILLE, and thence his descendants assumed that designation as a surname.

GALFRID DE MALEVILLE, the first of the family, lived in the reigns of DAVID I., MALCOLM IV., and WILLIAM the Lion. He was "Vicecomes de Castella Puellarum" for MALCOLM IV., and had the honour of being the first justiciary of Scotland on record. He left three sons, viz.,

- i. Gregory, whose line terminated in an heir female,
- AGNES-MELVILLE, who m. Sir John Ross, of Halkhead, temp. ROBERT II., and conveyed to him the islands of Melville.
- ii. PHILIP, ancestor of the MELVILLES of Glenberrie. This branch ended in the male line in 1468, when ALEXANDER MELVILLE of Glenberrie left a dau. and sole heir, ELIZABETH, m. to Sir John Auchinleck, of Auchinleck; and her grand-dau., ELIZABETH Auchinleck, carried the barony to her husband, SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, 2nd son of Archibald, 5th Earl of Angus.
- iii. WALTER.

The 3rd son,

WALTER DE MELVILLE, was grandfather of

SIR JOHN DE MELVILLE, one of the principal men of Scotland who agreed to the marriage of Queen MARGARET with Prince Edward of England, in 1290; and who swore fealty to EDWARD I. in 1296. From him we pass to his lineal descendant,

SIR JOHN MELVILLE, of Raith, who had charters, jointly with his wife, Helen Napier, of the king's lands of Murdo-carny, in Fife, dated 23 May, 1536, and 23 Oct. 1542. He enjoyed the confidence of JAMES V., who appointed him master-general of the ordnance, and captain-general of the castle of Dunbar, having previously knighted him. Sir John, in the minority of Queen MARY, was, however, convicted of treason, and executed towards the end of 1549. He m. Helen, eldest dau. of Sir Alexander Napier, of Merchistoun, and had issue,

- i. JOHN, who was restored to his father's forfeited estates by the Queen Regent of Scotland, about 1558, and then became of Raith. He was s. by his son,
- JOHN, of Raith, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Scott, of Balwearie, and was s. by his elder son,
- JOHN, of Raith, who s. his cousin, as 3rd Lord Melville.
- ii. ROBERT, of whom presently.
- iii. James (Sir), of Hall-hill, in Fife, ambassador from MARY to ELIZABETH, and of the privy-council to JAMES VI.; d. in 1617, leaving issue.
- iv. William, who was appointed a lord of session in 1587, and sat on the bench till 1614.
- v. Andrew (Sir), of Garvoek, master of the household to Queen MARY and to JAMES VI.
- vi. David, of Newmill.
- vii. Janet, m. to Sir James Kirkaldy, of Grange, high-treasurer of Scotland, by whom she was mother of Sir William and Sir James Kirkaldy, who were executed, in 1573, for their fidelity to Queen MARY.
- viii. Margaret, m. to Sir James Johnstone, of Elphinstone.

The 2nd son,

SIR ROBERT MELVILLE, of Murdocarmey, on his return from France, where he held some official employments, was sworn of the privy council of Scotland, and accredited ambassador to England in 1562. In 1567, he had a charter of the hereditary office of keeper of the palace of Linlithgow, and was sent a second time ambassador to England, in 1587, to endeavour to prevent the execution of MARY Queen of Scots; which duty he discharged with so much boldness before the council, that ELIZABETH menaced his life, and would have imprisoned him, but for the influence of his colleague, the master of Gray. In 1589, when lord Thirstane, the chancellor, went to Denmark on the affair of the king's marriage, Sir Robert was appointed vice-chancellor and treasurer-depute; and, in 1594, he was constituted an extraordinary lord of Session, under the title of Lord Murdocarmey; from this judicial office he retired in favour of his son, in 1601, and was elevated to the peerage, 30 April, 1616, as Baron Melville, of Monymaill, with special remainder, in default of his own male issue, to the heirs male of his brother, JOHN, &c. His lordship d. in 1621, at the age of 94, and was s. by his only son,

His estates were consequently forfeited by act of attainder in 1685; but returning to England with King WILLIAM, his lordship was fully reinstated in fortune and dignity on the success of that prince, with the additional honours (3 April, 1690) of Lord Raith, Monymaill, and Balcarrie, Viscount of Kirkcaldie, and EARL OF MELVILLE. Lineage of Lesley, Earls of Leven.

This family is a branch of the very ancient and historic house of Lesly or Leslie, Earls of Rothes.

WILLIAM LESLEY, who flourished in the reign of King JAMES II. and III., got charters under the Great Seal of the lands and barony of Balquhain, &c., and left (with several other sons), ALEXANDER, who succeeded him, and carried on the line of the family of Balquhain, and WILLIAM, from whom was lineally descended,

ALEXANDER LESLEY of Kininvie, who left issue two sons, ALEXANDER, who succeeded him in the lands of Kininvie, and GEORGE LESLY of Drumbruir, who m. Mary, dau. of — Stewart of Kiltowie, by whom he had a son,

GEORGE LESLY, a brave soldier, who had the command of the garrison in the castle of Blair in the reign of King JAMES VI.; he m. Anne, dau. of — Stewart of Ballechin, by whom he had a son,

SIR ALEXANDER LESLEY, one of the most noted soldiers of his time, remarkable for his coolness and courage, and his great knowledge in the military art. Lesley first acted as a volunteer in Lord Vere's regiment in Holland, where he soon rose to the degree of a captain. He then went to Sweden, and entered into the service of GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, and behaved so gallantly, that that warlike monarch raised him to the rank of a lieutenant-general, and then to that of field-marshal of his armies. In 1628, when the town of Stralsund was besieged by a victorious army, under the command of Count Walsten, and reduced almost to the last extremity, the King of Sweden sent General Lesly to take upon him the command of the garrison, and he there acted with such singular resolution and conduct, that he obliged the count to raise the siege. The burghers were so sensible of the great service Lesly had done them, that they struck several medals in his honour, some of which have been preserved in the family. In 1630, Lesly drove the Imperialists entirely out of Rugen, and continued in the Swedish service with high distinction until the troubles in Scotland brought him home. He was in 1638, invited by the Covenanters to take upon him the command of their army, which he accepted, and was made governor of the castle of Edinburgh in March, 1639. In 1640 he invaded England at the head of the Scotch army, and defeated a party of the king's troops under the command of Lord Conway, at Newburn, and took possession of Newcastle. At the treaty with the king at Ripon, General Lesley was one of the parliament's commissioners, and the king was so well pleased with the general's behaviour, that he created him LORD BALGONY, and EARL OF LEVEN, by patent dated 1641. After going in 1642 to Ireland to suppress the insurrection there, Lesly, Earl of Leven, had again in 1643 the command of the Scotch army that was sent to the assistance of the parliament's forces against the king; and the victory at Marston Moor in 1644 was chiefly ascribed to him. He was appointed in 1647 lord-general of Scotland. Notwithstanding his support of the parliamentarians, Lesly showed himself afterwards more loyal than otherwise, owing to his disapproval of the king's murder. After that event, none appeared more forward than the Earl of Leven in raising an army, and restoring King CHARLES II. He served as a volunteer against OLIVER CROMWELL at the battle of Dunbar, and heartily joined and concurred with the royalists in every measure for the restoration; but when he, with others of the royal party had a meeting in Angus, to concert matters for their future conduct, General Monk, who then besieged Dundee, having got intelligence of their meeting, sent a strong party in the night, surprised and took them prisoners at Alyth in Angus, and transferred the veteran Earl of Leven, with several others, prisoners to London, where they were confined in the Tower. The earl remained incarcerated there, and suffered sequestration and many other hardships, till by the mediation of the Queen of SWEDEN he obtained his liberty, and was so sensible of the service her majesty had done him, that he went over to Sweden in person to make his acknowledgments, and was there received and entertained with great respect, in honour of his former services. He at last returned to his own country, retired to his seat, Balgony, in Fife, and d. there at a very advanced age in 1662. The Earl m. Agnes, dau. of Renton of Billy, by whom he had two sons and five daus.,

This Earl caused the following alteration to be made in the descent of his title and lands. The King by his signature of 13th February, 1664, ordered a charter to that effect to be explicated under the great seal, and the same was accordingly done, 7th September, 1665. Mag. Sig. L. Ixi., No. 23. See Morison's Decisions, 14380. It should be remarked that the following events in respect to this bond and charter have happened; 1. LINDSEY, EARL OF (George-Augustus-Frederick-Albemarle Bertie), co. Lincoln; b. 4 Nov. 1814; s. as 10th earl, upon the decease of his father, 17 Sept. 1818.

Lineage.

This noble family, which eventually obtained the highest degree of rank in the British peerage, springs maternally from the WILLOUGHBYS, original Barons Willoughby de Eresby, and paternally from the Berties of Bersted in Kent.

The Berties were a very ancient house, deriving descent from a family of free Barons of Bertieland in Prussia. Their name, in olden deeds, is spelt Berteghe, Berteye, and Bertewe, in later, Bertye, and Bertie. They first landed in England, in company with the Saxons, and their descendant, Leopold Bertie, was constable of Dover Castle in the reign of King ETHELRED, and was also the proprietor of a castle and town named Bertested, now Bersted, near Maidstone, in Kent. Leopold having fallen into a violent dispute with the Augustine Monks of Canterbury about tithes, and the monks endeavouring to enforce their demands by force of arms, a fray ensued, in which Leopold's son was slain. The king giving Leopold no satisfaction, he solicited Sweyn, King of the Danes, and induced him to invade England. The Danes joining Leopold's forces in Kent, laid siege to Canterbury, and took the archbishop prisoner, and slew the monks by nines, sparing every tenth. On the death of Sweyn, however, Ethelred returned to England, and Burbaeh Bertie, only surviving son of Leopold, conscious of his father's actions, fled to Robert, the French king, who received him honourably, and taking to wife a Frenchwoman, he settled in France, where his posterity continued till 1154, when his descendant, Philip Bertie "de eadem familia," accompanied HENRY II. to England, and "propter bellandi peritiam," recovered from that monarch his patrimony of Bersted. (See Hasted's History of Kent, vol. ii. p. 488.) This Philip's lineal descendant, Hieronimus Bertie (temp. HENRY V.) was excommunicated, and had to make a pilgrimage to Rome for the following offence. Hearing a monk in a sermon utter assertions injurious to his ancestor Leopold, he rushed violently upon the preacher, and, but for the interference of the bystanders, would have slain him. Hieronimus appeased the anger of the Church by a severe personal penance, and by the payment of two thousand crowns of gold to the monastery of the monk whom he had assaulted. He further, in proof of his repentance, rebuilt, at his own expense, the north part of the temple belonging to the same monastery, and his armorial bearings, three battering rams and a shattered castle, were placed there on one of the pillows. (Lansdowne MSS. 205 f. 72; Harleian MSS. 245 f. 95 B.; Glovers' Coll. Colleg. arms A. p. 25; ditto 2 H. 5. p. 67; ditto A. f. 41; Vincent's Baronagium, 20 f. 22.) From him descended

ROBERT BERTIE, Lord of Bersted (see Rawlinson's MS. Boileian, B. 73), who had a son, Robert, who lived at Bersted, and m. Marion, dau. of — (see his Will at Canterbury, dated 17th year of King HENRY VII.), and had a son, WILLIAM, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Pep. and was father of THOMAS BERTIE, who having "a long tyme used himself in feates of arms," was appointed by HENRY VIII. "Capitainus Castris de Hurst, in co. Southampton." He d. in 1555, leaving by his wife, Alicia, dau. of — Say, of Salop, two sons, RICHARD, his heir, who, with his brother Thomas, in 1546, suffered a recovery of lands in Bersted and Mailstone (see fines, Chapter House, Westminster). This Richard Bertie, b. in 1518, was a fellow of Corp. Christ. Coll., Oxford, bred to the bar, and finished his education under Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, and being singularly accomplished, well-versed in the French, Italian, and Latin tongues (see Churchyard's translation of M. Teramus), he gained the affections, and m. in 1553, one of the most distinguished ladies of the day, Katherine, Baroness Willoughby de Eresby, in her own right, as dau. and sole heir of William Willoughby, the last Lord Willoughby de Eresby of that family, and Duchess Dowager of Suffolk, as widow of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. The escape of this lady and her husband, Mr. Bertie, from England into Germany and Poland, in the reign of Queen MARY, was a remarkable event of the period, and forms an interesting narrative in Part I. of an able account of the Berties, entitled, Five Generations of a Loyal House. Mr. Bertie and his wife returned to England at Queen MARY's death, and she d. in 1580; and he d. in 1582: their only son,

PEREGRINE BERTIE, upon the demise of his mother, was summoned to parliament (10 Nov. 1580) as 11th Baron Willoughby de Eresby. He was b. 12 Oct. 1555, at Wesel, in Germany, and was one of the most distinguished military characters of his day. Sir Robert Naunton, in his Pragmatica Regalia, speaks of him as "one of the Queen's first swordsmen, and a great master of the art military." He commanded the second of the five armies sent into France by Queen ELIZABETH in aid of HENRY IV. of Navarre, and in Historia Belgica many of his exploits in the Low Countries are enumerated,* where he made ten knights (Harleian MSS. 6063, f. 45, p. 26). Sir Francis Vere one, who acknowledged that to him he owed his military

"On the 22nd of September, 1586, an interesting affray took place, in which Lord Willoughby pre-eminently distinguished himself by valour and conduct; and many others with him upheld the glory of the English name. Sir John Norreis and Sir William Stanley were that day reconciled: the former coming forward to say, 'Let us die together in her Majesty's cause.' The enemy were desirous of throwing supplies into Zutphen, a place of which they entertained some doubt; and a convoy accordingly, by the orders of the Prince of Parma, brought in a store, though an insufficient one, of provisions. A second, commanded by George Cressiae, an Albanian, was despatched for the same purpose, the morning being foggy. Lord Willoughby, Lord Audley, Sir John Norreis, and Sir Philip Sidney, encountering the convoy in the fog, an engagement began. The Spaniards had the advantage of position, and had it in their power to discharge two or three volleys of shot upon the English, who nevertheless stood their ground. Lord Willoughby himself, with his lance in rest, met with the leader, George Cressiae, engaged with, and after a sharp combat unhorsed him. He fell into a ditch crying aloud to his victor, 'I yielded myself to you, for that you be a seemly knight,' who satisfied by the submission, and having other matters in hand, threw himself into the thickest of the combat, while the captive was conducted to the tent of the general, Lord Leicester. The engagement was hot, and cost the enemy many lives, but few of the English were missing. Willoughby was extremely forward in the combat: at one moment his basses (or mantle) was torn from him but recaptured. When all was over, Captain Cressiae being still in his Excellency's tent, refused to acknowledge himself prisoner to any but the knight to whom he had submitted on the field. There is something in this, and the like incidents of the period which read us very agreeably to recollections of earlier days of chivalry and romance. Cressiae added, that if he were to see again the knight to whom he had surrendered himself, in the armour he then wore, he should immediately recognize him, and that to him and him only would he yield. Accordingly Lord Willoughby presenting himself before him in complete armour, he immediately exclaimed, 'I yield to you,' and was adjudged to him as his Hist., p. 142.)^a He d. governor of Berwick, 1601.† His lordship m. Mary, dau. of John Vere, Earl of Oxford, and aunt and heir of the whole blood of Henry, 18th Earl of Oxford, by whom he had issue, ROBERT, his successor, with four other sons (of whom Peregrine was ancestor of the Berties, of Low Layton, Essex; and Henry, ancestor of the Berties, of Louth, Lincolnshire); and a dau., Catherine, m. to Sir Lewis Watson, of Rockingham Castle, afterwards Lord Rockingham. Lord Willoughby was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT BERTIE, 12th Baron Willoughby de Eresby, K.G. This nobleman, like his father, was brought up to the profession of arms, and in the month of June, 1596, accompanied (his godfather) Robert, Earl of Essex, to Cadiz, where, being under a heavy fire, a council was held whether they should attack the city; the majority determined upon entering the bay, when Essex and his youthful companion simultaneously tossed up their caps with delight. A furious onset was then made to gain the city, and while storming the gate, the old women throwing down large stones on the besiegers, gave rise to the following remark, expressed by Robert Bertie, on being knighted, that "an old woman with a stone knocked down the esquire, and the general commanded him to rise a knight." He afterwards laid claim, in right of his mother, to the Earldom of Oxford, the feudal Barony of Bolebec, the Barony of Badlesmere, and the office of lord-great-chamberlain of England, but was only able to establish his pretensions to the last. His lordship was, however, created EARL OF LANSEY, 22 Nov. 1626, and elected in four years afterwards a knight of the Garter. In the 11th of CHARLES I., he was constituted lord-high-admiral of England; and in 1629, was appointed governor of Berwick.‡ His lordship fell at the battle of Edgehill, 23 Oct. 1642, at the head of a division of the royal army, and was s. by his eldest son prisoner. It was in this skirmish that the gallant and lamented Sir Philip Sidney, the boast of his age, and the hope of many admiring friends, received the fatal wound which cut short the thread of a brief but brilliant existence. During the whole day he had been one of the foremost in action, and once rushed to the assistance of his friend Lord Willoughby, on observing him 'nearly surrounded by the enemy' and in imminent peril: after seeing him in safety he continued the combat with great spirit, until he received a shot in the thigh as he was remounting a second horse, the first having been killed under him."

* The Harleian MSS. 6063, fol. 45, p. 26, gives the "Knights made by the Lord Willoughby in the Low Countries, viz.:— Sir Thom. Willford, Sir Francis Vere, Sir John Polley, Sir John Pore, Sir Nicholas Parker, Sir Tho. Knowles, Sir John Scott, Sir Ed. † In a letter (MSS. Bibb. Imp. Dupuy, 279, 80, 81, p. 23, translated by Miss Freer in her History of Henry the 4th of France and Navarre. Vol. 1, pp. 70 and 71.) Queen ELIZABETH thus writes to Henry the Great respecting Lord Willoughby:—

"My very dear Brother.—Could I have divined that your own reinforcements would have made so tardy a junction with your army, I would have shown myself more diligent for the transport of those which I now send you. These troops, truly, might already have done you service, had it been possible to effect their victualing more promptly. Nevertheless, my brother, I doubt not, now that you have them, that these my good soldiers, will prove eager to do you service, as if they were contending for my own life and honour. As for the valiant baron (Peregrine, 11th Lord Willoughby), my lieutenant; I dare assert that you will find him, a true servant of God, loyal to his Queen; and noble of heart. I have given this worthy baron strict charge to act as if always in my presence when the opportunity arrives to render you service; and to believe that I personally witness his valour and conduct. Therefore, you may trust this noble gentleman—one discreet as he is valiant. I have, moreover, intimated to him my will that he renders you perfect obedience: also, that neither he, nor the soldiers of his battalion, molest any servant of yours under the pretext of religion; for, my brother, I send them to fight for you, and not to preach.

"I pray you, count upon me as one who deems herself happy to serve you in your need: for God is witness, that daily I supplicate Him to grant you victory over your foes. From your very trusty, Sister and Cousin, ELIZABETH."

"Upon Sunday, at the going to chapel, the king took the lord chamberlain's wand from him, and gave him in lieu thereof a silver mace, and made him lord high constable for the trial of the difference betwixt Donald Mackay, Lord Rae, and Sir David Hamess." From letter of Sir George Gresley to Sir Thomas Pickering, dated Essex House, Nov. 19th, 1631:—

MONTAGU, 2nd earl, K.G. This nobleman being with his gallant father at Edgehill, when his lordship received his death-wound, voluntarily surrendered himself a prisoner, in order to be near and to attend him. He was subsequently an active commander during the civil wars, on the same side. "He was," says Archdeacon Echard, "one of the Quadrumvrate that had been so eminently distinguished for their unparalleled loyalty to the late king, by offering their lives as his counsellors; a brave experienced soldier; a great patron of useful learning and ingenuity; and a true patriot, and imitator of ancient nobility. After having received wounds at Naseby, and waded through an ocean of difficulties, he died in quiet, peace, and honour, at Campden House, Kensington, the 25th of July, 1666, aged 58, and was buried at Edenharn, in the vault with his noble father." Lineage.

The name of VAUGHAN is of great note and antiquity in the principality of Wales; and this branch of the family has been long seated at Trawescoed, in the co. of Cardigan; whereof Edward Vaughan, Esq., m. Lettie, dau. of John Steadman, Esq., and was father of SIR JOHN VAUGHAN, Knt., a most learned lawyer, who was educated at the King's school of Worcester, whence, after five years' stay, he was removed to Christ Church, Oxford, in the 15th year of his age, and thence at 18 to the Inner Temple, where for some time he preferred his academical studies of poetry and the mathematics to the municipal laws of England, till at length, falling into the acquaintance of the learned Selden and others, he was instructed by them in the value of civil learning, and applied closely to the course of that study, particularly of the law, which he made his profession. In the parliament which began 3 Nov. 1640, he was M.P. for the town of Cardigan, and was noted and admired for his learned speeches; but the civil war breaking out gave a stop to his studies, and obliged him to retire to his own country, where he chiefly lived till the Restoration. After that event he was elected to represent the co. of Cardigan, in the parliament of 1661, and the king took notice of his great worth and experience, and knighted him in 1668, and a few days after he was sworn sergeant-at-law, and the next day chief-justice of the court of Common Pleas. He wrote and collected the reports and arguments of that court, during the period he presided there, being all Special Cases, which he published in a folio volume; he d. in 1674, and was buried in the Temple church, near the grave of his friend Selden, under a marble monument. LLOYD, SIR THOMAS-DAVIES, Bart. of Bronwydd, co. Cardigan, M.P. for co. Cardigan, J.P., D.L., and in 1850, high sheriff of that county; formerly an officer 13th light dragoons; b. 19 May, 1820; created a Baronet, 21 Jan. 1863; m. Dec. 1846, Henrietta-Mary, dau. of the late George Reid, Esq. of Watlington, by his wife, Louisa, dau. of Sir Charles Oakely, Bart., and has a son,

MARTEINE-OWEN-MOWBRAY, b. 8 Feb. 1851.

Sir Thomas-Davies Lloyd is, by right of tenure, 23rd Lord of the Barony of Kemes, co. Pembroke, in hereditary descent from MARTIN DE TOURS, one of the companions in arms of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. The Barony of Kemes is the only "Lordship Marcher" now in existence in the kingdom; and the lords thereof still exercise a portion of their rights, and annually appoint, under their hands and seals, the mayors of Newport, co. Pembroke.

Lineage.

MARTIN DE TOURS, a Norman, who accompanied the Conqueror to England having as one of the Lord-Marchers, acquired, by conquest, a large district in Pembrokehire, called CEMARS or KEMES, became PALATINE BARON thereof. He made Newport the head of his Palatinate, and there erected his castle (the ruins of which still exist). He was s. by his son, ROBERT MARTIN, Lord Palatine of Kemes, who m. Maud Peveler, and had a son and successor,

WILLIAM MARTIN, Lord Palatine of Kemes, 16 HENRY II. He m. the dau. of Rhys ap Griffith, and was s. by his son,

In 29 HENRY III, Nicholas received command to assist the Earl of Gloucester, and other the Barons-Marcher, against the Welsh. He was s. by his grandson,

WILLIAM MARTIN, Lord Palatine of Kemes (son of Nicholas, who d. v. p.). He was summoned to Parliament from 23 EDWARD I to 18 EDWARD II, and dying in the latter year, was s. by his son, WILLIAM MARTIN, Lord Palatine of Kemes, at whose decease the barony of Martin fell into abeyance between his heirs, Eleanor, his sister, wife of William de Columbers, and James de Audley, his nephew, son of Joane, his sister, by Nicholas de Audley, Lord Audley.

In the family of Audley, the barony of Kemes continued vested for several successive generations, until it passed, by right of inheritance, to the OWENS of Henllys, descended from the Martins, ancient Lords-Marcher of Kemes.

With the OWENS of Henllys the lordship of Kemes remained, until conveyed by the daughter and heiress of WILLIAM LLOYD, Esq. of Penpedwast, Lord of Kemes, who was heir-general of the OWENS, in marriage to THOMAS LLOYD, Esq. of Bronwydd, co. Cardigan. This gentleman was son of THOMAS LLOYD, Esq. of Bronwydd (living in 1700), by Ann his wife, dau. of Lewis Morgan, Esq. of Wiston, co. THOMAS LLOYD was 2nd son (by Margaret, his wife, heiress of Bronwydd, dau. of Thomas ap Owain), of DAVID AP RHYS, of Crynfryn, a descendant of the ancient Lords of Dyfed. LOCKHART.

LOCKHART, SIR NORMAN MACDONALD, of Lee and Carnwath, co. Lanark, D.L. for that co., b. in 1845; s. his father, as 4th baronet, 1849.

Lineage.

This family has an undoubted right to rank as one of the oldest in Scotland, the surname of Lockhart being of great antiquity and distinction. There is to be found evidence of this in the reigns of DAVID I. and MALCOLM IV.; the latter of whom succeeded to the crown in the year 1153: during whose time appears,

STEPHANUS LOCKARD, a "man of rank and distinction," who was s. by

SIMON LOCKARD, who had afterwards the honour of knighthood conferred upon him by King WILLIAM (who ascended the throne in 1165). But for a particular account of the descent of the family, reference should be made to DOUGLAS'S Baronage of Scotland, p. 323. Following the descent, we come to

SIR SIMON LOCARD, of Lee, who accompanied Lord James Douglas to the Holy Land, with the heart of the deceased monarch, for interment. From this circumstance, the Douglasses bear in their arms a crowned heart; and Sir Simon changed his name to Lockheart (as it was until lately spelt), and for part of his arms got a heart within a lock, and the motto, "Corda serrata pando." In the possession of this family is that singular piece of antiquity called The Lee Penny, upon which is founded Sir Walter Scott's romance of The Talisman. The account given of it is that Simon Locard, during his stay in the Holy Land, took prisoner a Saracen chief, whose wife came to ransom him, and on the counting out of the money or jewels, this (which is a stone or composition of a dark red colour and triangular shape, set on a silver coin) fell; she hastily snatched it up, which Simon observing, insisted upon having it, and procured it before giving up his prisoner. More of this singular relic, and its alleged properties and virtues, may be found in Sir Walter Scott's preface to The Talisman.

Continuing to follow the descent, we come to

SIR JAMES LOCKHART, b. in 1596, a lord of the court of Session in Scotland, and afterwards lord-justice-clerk, as Lord Lee, in the time of CHARLES I. He m. twice; by his 1st wife, Helen, dau. of Alexander Fairly, of Braid, he had no issue; by his 2nd, Martha, dau. of Sir George Douglas, of Mordington (brother of James, Lord Torborough), and maid of honour to CHARLES I.'s queen, he had, with two daus., four sons, namely, I. WILLIAM (Sir); II. GEORGE (Sir), of whom hereafter; III. JOHN (Sir), of Castlehill, appointed by CHARLES II. one of the senators of the College of Justice, and a Lord of Justiciary; and IV. ROBERT, killed in the civil wars. Sir James was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM LOCKHART, b. in 1621, an eminent statesman, and one of the greatest politicians of his age, well known as Ambassador Lockhart, having been many years accredited to the court of France. He afterwards s. his father as lord-justice-clerk. He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Sir John Hamilton, Bart. of Orbieston, by whom he had one son, James, d. unm. LOTHIAN, MARQUESS OF (William-Schomberg-Robert Kerr), Earl of Ancrum and Earl of Lothian, Viscount of Briene, Baron Newbottle, and Baron Jedburgh, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Kerr, of Kerraheugh, co. Roxburgh, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; b. 12 Aug. 1832; m. 12 Aug. 1857, Lady Constance Talbot, dau. of the 18th Earl of Shrewsbury; s. as 8th marquess, at the decease of his father, 14 Nov. 1841.

Lineage.

Two families of Kerr, of Anglo-Norman lineage, descended, it is said, from two brothers, settled in Scotland in the 13th century, and neither yielding superiority to the other, formed two separate races of warlike borderers. Of the family of KERR of Cessford, the Duke of Roxburgh is the chief; and of the KERRS of Fernihirst, the noble house of which we are now about to treat is the representative.

MARK KERR, 2nd son of Sir Andrew Kerr, of Cessford, entering into holy orders, was promoted, in 1546, to the dignity of Abbot of Newbottle, in which station the Reformation found him in 1560, when he adopted the new doctrines, and held his benefice in commendam. He had the vicarage of Lintoun, co. Peebles, for life, in 1564; and was appointed one of the extraordinary lords of Session in 1569. He m. Helen, 2nd dau. of George, 4th Earl of Rothes, and had issue,

- I. MARK, his successor.
- II. Andrew, of Fentoun.
- III. George, who is mentioned by Robertson as an emissary from the Catholic noblemen to the court of Spain in 1592.
- IV. William.

1. Catherine, m. to William, Lord Herries.

He d. in 1584, and was s. by his eldest son,

MARK KERR, an extraordinary lord of Session, and master of requests, who had the abbacy of Newbottle erected into a temporal barony, with the title of Baron, 28 July, 1587; and obtained a charter of the Baronies of Prestongrange and Newbottle, united into the lordship of Newbottle, with the title of a lord of parliament, 15 Oct. 1591. He was appointed one of the commissioners for holding the parliament in 1597, and created Earl of Lothian, 10 Feb. 1606. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Herries, and had, with daus.,

- I. ROBERT, his successor.
- II. William (Sir), of Blackhope, who, on the death of his brother, assumed the title of Earl of Lothian, but was interdicted from using it by the lords of council, 8 March, 1632.
- III. Mark (Sir).
- IV. James.

The earl was s. at his decease, in 1609, by his eldest son, ROBERT, 2nd Earl of Lothian. This nobleman m. Lady Annabel a Campbell, dau. of Archibald, 7th Earl of Argyll, by whom he had two daus., Anne and Johanna; but having no son, his lordship obtained permission from the crown to transfer his titles and estates to his elder dau. at his decease; which event taking place in 1624, that lady became

ANNE, Countess of Lothian, and married

SIR WILLIAM KERR, Knt., who, in consequence, was elevated to the peerage, 24 June, 1631, by the title of Earl of Lothian. His lordship was only son (by his 1st wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Murray, of Blackbarony) of

ROBERT KERR (descended from Thomas Kerr, of Kerraheugh, who built a house in the middle of Jedburgh Forest, and naming it Fernihirst, was designated by that title in the records of parliament, 1476), who was created Earl of Ancrum, Lord Kerr, of Nisbit, Longnorton, and Dolphington, 24 June, 1629, with remainder to the male descendants of his 2nd marriage; and in default of those, to his issue male whatsoever. His lordship m. 2ndly, Anne, only surviving dau. of William (Stanley), Earl of Derby, and widow of Sir Henry Portman, of Orchard Portman, co. Somerset, by whom he had a son, Charles, and several daus. Lord Ancrum was the confidential friend of King CHARLES I., who, when Prince of Wales, was the means of bringing about his marriage with the Lady Anne Stanley. In 1620, he had the misfortune to kill in a duel Charles Maxwell, whose brother was a member of the king's family, and was obliged, in consequence, to fly to Holland, but was received into royal favour in the next year. He d. in 1654, and was s. according to the limitation, by the son of his second marriage,

His lordship, who was knight of the Thistle, one of the representative peers, and a major-general in the army, m. Jane, dau. of the unfortunate Earl of Argyll, who was beheaded in 1685; and dying in 1722; was s. by his only son,

Lineage.

The clan FRASER, of which Lord Lovat is the chief, are of Norman descent. The name of FRISELL, their original designation, occurs in the roll of Battle Abbey, and establishes their advent under the standard of the CONQUEROR. From East Lothian, their earliest resting-place in Scotland, the Frasers diverged into Tweeddale in the 12th and 13th centuries, and subsequently into the shires of Inverness and Aberdeen. Oliver Fraser, the chief of the clan, built and gave his name to Oliver Castle, which continued in after times their principal feudal hold.
